Faith of our fathers living still

By J. Lawrence Burkholder

Poland is hardly the place to go for a clue to the condition of the Mennonite Church. There are no Mennonites left in Poland, although a meetinghouse still stands in Danzig on "Mennonite Street." But last summer while visiting Goshen's Study-Service Trimester (SST) unit in Warsaw, I was led to think about the influences that gave the unit its distinctive character. How could one account for the difference which the Polish people found between our students and the stereotype of American youth? How could one account for the quality of SST group life, worship, maturity, willingness to work and sensitivity to Polish life and manner?

The answer to these questions may be supplied in part by Prof. Czerwinski of the faculty of the Agricultural University of Warsaw who supervised the field experience of the unit on two large state farms. Here is what he entered in the flyleaf of a gift book to Goshen.

> For six weeks we've been staying together! It was a great pleasure for me to meet you. In everyday connection you were very nice, worthwhile young people. It's not only my opinion, but also of all people, whom you met during your stay in Poland. Your College might be proud of you!
> It seems to me that great role here plays your religious community — Mennonite Church, which forms your personality as thinking, non-conformistic Christians, trying to lead the world to unity and brotherhood between peoples and nations and in personal and social life to behave according to principles of active Christianity. I liked it very much indeed.
> Thanks for your warm, kind words to me, which I found at your memorial book "Maple Leaf 74." I'll be thinking about you for a long time. I do hope you won't forget about Poland and please remember that you left here a lot of friends and one of them is me. God bless you.
> Yours,
> /s/E. Czerwinski

The source of life for our students

What intrigued me was Prof. Czerwinski's perception of the Church as the principal source of the life and manner of our students. Before he met the SST unit he had never heard about the Mennonites. But after living with them, seeing how they cared for each other, sang by memory from the Mennonite Hymnal (606 et al.), noticed how they picked strawberries even in the rain, visited Polish homes, churches and farms, he attributed their demeanor and life-style to the Mennonite background.

When I left Warsaw, the vice-rector of the Agricultural University, a Polish national with a Ph.D. from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said, "We have observed three characteristics of your students. They are willing to work; they have a deep understanding of Christianity, and they were sensitive to the Polish people."

Under stress the best shows up

Obviously one can easily overdo the influence of the Mennonite Church on the SST unit. After all, only two-thirds of the students were Mennonites. However, I always come back from visiting SST, whether in Haiti, Costa Rica, Honduras or Poland, impressed by the way foreign cultures bring out distinctive qualities of faith and life in our students. Under the stress of new situations a residue of attitudes and values which belong to the best in our tradition emerge in ways so clearly manifest on the campus or at home.

This leads me in my most cynical moments not to give up on the Mennonite Church. To be sure, the Mennonite Church has lost many of its unique practices; some Mennonites are really embarrassed by their heritage; they regret its minority status among American churches; they see traditional doctrines such as nonresistance, brotherhood, discernment and discipline as replicas of the past or at best additives.

The young must translate the faith

Nevertheless, "there is still something there," as one trusted leader of the church recently put it. We must hope and pray that young people in particular who have not found it necessary to react, as their parents did, against earlier distortions of the Mennonite faith may translate the faith of the fathers into forms fitting to modern life without losing its essence.

The best in the Mennonite tradition does not come out only on SST. The integrity of Mennonite relief efforts throughout the world, the enlightened approach of Mennonite missions, especially in Africa, the quality of life of many humble people in small congregations enables us to sing with a measure of confidence, "Faith of our fathers, living still. . . ."

Our insights into the church

Throughout the last year, we as a singing group have become more familiar with the Mennonite Church and its functions. Sharing with numerous congregations across the country, we have come in contact with a wide assortment of Mennonite cultural expressions within the church. Through our particular involvement in the church, we have been made aware of a "renewal" movement, a deeper commitment to a Jesus life-style, cutting across cultural lines, and we have gained some helpful insights into several areas of Mennonite church life.

Mennonites held well to their name; warm hospitality greeted us everywhere. Fellowship dinners and overnight stays in homes were indicative of the typical warm Mennonite spirit of acceptance and hospitality. On one trip during the energy crisis, we did not have enough gas to travel the next day, a Sunday. However, a couple from the host church took us to their home, filled us and our gas tank, insisting that we not pay for it. We found this kind of Christian hospitality and friendliness everywhere.

However, while fellowship of this kind flourished, there seemed to be a lack of open communication at times, that is, people wanted to share but did not possess the readiness, or simply did not know how.

"The Good News" was one of three student musical groups to visit churches last year. During the year the group gave about 60 programs in eight states and Canada. In their programs, the group sang and led songs with some audience participation, read Scripture, and shared personal life experiences.

After giving a program, we would mix with the congregation, hoping to hear a response to our message, but usually hearing little besides comment on our sound.

Sharing freely is rewarding

There were certainly exceptions to this type of communication. Many people shared freely about themselves, their church, their victories, their failures. As a result of sharing with these people, we realized that there is a dedicated core of Christians, consciously allowing Jesus to be Lord of their lives, and dedicating themselves to the upbuilding of the Church and God's kingdom. It is evident that these people are encouraging those who are "less open" to a deeper and more rewarding Christian experience.

It was fulfilling for us to see many of the congregations beginning to sense a new freedom in worship. Several of our songs involve congregational participation. Responses to a song like "His Banner over Me Is Love" were heartening. Many people were initially reluctant to do the motions to the song, but after more encouragement, they realized that they were actually enjoying doing those motions.

A thirst for the "new" worship

We have sensed that Mennonites are beginning to taste the joy that worship potentially offers and are becoming more thirsty for that "new wine." We have observed that small-group involvement has been a primary factor in bringing to attention the need for a faith that does not simply lie dormant, but a faith that is expressed.

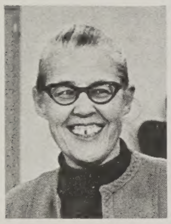
One aspect of expression is service, and we have also come into contact with that area of Mennonite life. We have found a balanced ministry meeting both physical and spiritual needs. This was apparent in our camp experiences at Camp Deerpark, New York, and Laurelville, Pennsylvania, and especially in the Boardwalk Ministry at Ocean City, Maryland.

The existing Mennonite structures of service are praiseworthy, but there is a need for more individuals who are grounded solidly in the Word, and display a desire to be prompted and empowered by the Spirit. Serving will not effectively further the kingdom until man's sense of duty is replaced by a Spirit-initiated vision.

The church is remarkably open

By Mary Oyer



I have had the privilege during the past five years of visiting congregations to introduce the Mennonite Hymnal. The pleasure I find in these meetings goes far beyond my expectations.

My earliest feelings about the "constituency" came from my vague awareness that there was tension and difficulty between the college and the church. My father was appointed dean when the college reopened following a painful year of closing. Fear rather than trust predominated, and I absorbed this atmosphere as a young child.

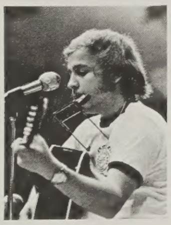
An uneasiness about the church persisted during the years I worked on the Hymnal. I was reminded often — either by external suggestion or internal fear — that "the church" would not be willing to accept changes, that it was suspicious of the snobbish committee, that it would not value the careful, scholarly aspects of our work.

My reacquaintance with the constituency and the church in the past few years has destroyed those illusions. In church music, the area of my deepest involvement, I find a remarkable openness. Now I wonder why, in making the Hymnal, we did not have the vision to anticipate the sudden broadening of tastes which came around the time of the actual publication date. This openness to change is frequently accompanied by an appreciation for our tradition and an informed interest in what goes on beyond the local congregation. And I am especially grateful for the warmth and genuineness of interchange and insight which come through singing together.

Mary Oyer is professor of music at Goshen College. From 1964 to 1969 she was executive secretary of the Mennonite Hymnal, which was published in 1969.

What I found in the church

By Marvin Graber as told to Mervin Zook



First, there is a quality of hospitality and warmth in the church that simply has to be experienced. People fed me big meals like I was a king, and received me into their homes with graciousness as well as an eagerness to talk and get better acquainted.

Second, I detected a diversity of viewpoints and practices in the church regarding (1) openness during group services, and (2) activities of the youth. In some churches, the group would freely clap their hands after my songs, and during the question-and-answer period, was forthright in wondering how I adjusted to being blind, how I got around, and how I felt about being blind.

In other churches, there was an element of shyness. For example, some confessed after the service that since I couldn't see the expressions on their faces, they felt they should have applauded. There was also a bit of hesitation in asking questions that could appear to be prying into my personal affairs. In spite of this, I felt the love and appreciation of the group.

To me, the young persons are the future of the church. But I wonder whether they are getting the attention they should have. In some churches, for example, where there are youth pastors or dynamic leadership, I sensed enthusiasm, informality, and that in a corner of a room or the churchyard a few persons would be talking about something in the Bible.

In other churches, the youth seemed to be there because it was "the thing to do." Their interests were hardly captured by the church. There seemed to be an emphasis, for example, on the needs overseas, but they seemed to be excluding the needs within their own group.

What I remember most, though, is the hunger in the church for the Source of courage to get on with life. I can't remember the number of persons who confided to me, "If you can praise God in spite of what has happened to you, then I can too." Or, "You really gave me a lift tonight." Or, "Tonight God spoke to me through you and the songs you sang." This Source allows us to have a touch of heaven here on earth.

Marvin Graber, blind since he was 10, will be a senior at GC in January. His major is social services and he is considering a career in high school social work. At the present time he is in Kokomo, IN, learning the trade of piano tuning and repair.

Last April and May he, accompanied by Jim Widmer, made 36 appearances before church and youth groups in 28 days. Their itinerary was Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania, and the program was solos, selections on the harmonica and guitar, plus personal sharing about how the blind read, write and get around.

The church: alert, searching

Interview with Jim Widmer

This is Mervin Zook for the Bulletin interviewing Jim Widmer, a medical student at the University of Iowa in Iowa City, Iowa. Jim, a 1974 graduate, completed his work last December and then joined the Goshen College admissions department for a short-term assignment, which included accompanying Marvin Graber on his tour. Jim, how did you view the churches of Marvin's tour from your vantage point as being the detail man, the man in the back seat?

A. From the perspective of congregational life as I know it at the churches I have attended — at Sugar Creek, Wayland, Iowa, and at Hesston, and College Mennonite at Goshen — there were no wide extremes, no extreme conservatives and no extreme liberals. However, there were differences in the overtones in congregational life. So much seemed to depend on the pastor and his views of the church. However, the pastors I got acquainted with seemed to have an understanding of what the needs were of their members.

Q. What needs do congregations seem to be alert to?

A. The congregations as a whole are trying to make sincere searches to function as a true church. They appear to be working seriously at improvements in Christian life. Members are trying to apply what they know about the Christian life to themselves and their fellow Christians. I would affirm them on the one hand, and at the same time, on the other hand, would wonder how they could become more aware of the needs of the world beyond their congregations.

Q. Were there any surprises or unanticipated incidents during the tour?

A. First, I felt we were better received and accepted by the churches than I expected, even though the tour could be easily seen by pastors as a promotion for Goshen College. Second, the program Marv gave made people acutely conscious of what they have yet take for granted. People were so amazed at how Marv could get around and sing and speak, they realized anew what abilities and capacities they have within themselves. Third, the crowds were surprisingly large.

Q. How would you describe the feelings of the church toward the message Marv gave?

A. People seemed to be aware of what was happening in the service and they picked up his message fast. However, I detected a hesitancy among the people to be free to come right out and express themselves and their experiences. Of course, a good bit depended on the community and the group. Nevertheless, overall there seemed to be a bit of resistance to pour out one's feelings.

Q. How do you personally feel about the results of the tour?

A. It is difficult to generalize about the church when Marv and I did not stay in any community for more than a few hours. Nevertheless, I appreciated the discussions and meeting many families. I feel positive about the church.

Writers' conference set for Feb. 28 - Mar. 2

The past ten years have seen an impressive production and achievement among Mennonite authors.

> *In Edmonton, Rudy Wiebe wins the Governor General's prize — the highest literary prize in Canada — for fiction.
> *In Lancaster, I. Merle Good produces the first feature-length film about Mennonites, writes and directs plays about Mennonites at the Dutch Family Festival, and publishes the first magazine devoted to Mennonite arts.
> *From Fresno to Waterloo, Urie Bender writes plays and pageants that explore the Mennonite past and present.
> *In Scottdale and Newton, Mennonite publishing houses continue an impressive output of books and innovative magazines.
> *Elsewhere, other professional and amateur writers produce poems, plays, and stories — some of them submitted for publication, others buried in desk drawers.

Despite this new interest in the literary arts, Mennonite writers have tended to work independently, seldom having opportunity to discuss their work with fellow authors, or to communicate the problems and rewards of their craft to a larger, sympathetic audience.

All writers welcome

At the Mennonite Writers' Conference scheduled for the weekend of February 28 through March 2, Goshen College will provide such an opportunity. Co-sponsored by the English department and the Center for Discipleship, the conference welcomes all professional, amateur, and even would-be writers who seek stimulus and counsel in their efforts, as well as an audience for their recent work.

Although the conference will devote some attention to the problem of the writer's relation to his heritage, the main emphasis will be upon the writer's craft. Major input for the conference will consist of presentations by four professional writers: Rudy Wiebe on fiction, Nick Lindsay on poetry, Urie Bender on drama, and J. Daniel Hess on feature stories. In addition, a representative of the Mennonite Publishing House will also address conferees on the marketing of manuscripts.

Manuscripts may be submitted early

Participants are encouraged to bring manuscripts with them for discussion with others in attendance at the conference. If manuscripts are submitted a month early, they will be given written evaluation by the professional writers named above. At a later date, the English department of Goshen College will also publish an anthology of writings by conference participants in its Pinchpenny Press series.

The conference will provide ample time for informal interchange and for attendance at other campus activities during the weekend. It will conclude with a Sunday luncheon, followed by a program of readings by participants in the conference.

'Mennonite Artists Contemporary' is a plus

An important event in the Goshen College commemoration of the 450th anniversary of the founding of the Anabaptist movement in Switzerland, the conference will take place during the "Mennonite Artists Contemporary" exhibit in the art gallery, thus offering an added dimension for writers who are also interested in the work of Mennonites currently productive in the visual arts.

Additional details regarding the conference will be announced in later editions of the Bulletin; a descriptive brochure and registration blank may be obtained by writing to Mennonite Writers' Workshop, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526.

Educating for brotherhood

By Steve Dintaman

The label "Peoplehood Education" might frighten the person who isn't familiar with the term — and who fears some new theory of education from the ivory-tower folks. While Peoplehood Education as a total package is basically new, it grows out of nearly a decade of intensive thinking and writing on the subject. And in a larger sense, it grows out of ideas deeply embedded in the Anabaptist experience. It assumes that our allegiance to Jesus as Lord is the center of values and determines our perspective toward the wider world, that these values should be applied consistently in the face of hostile world powers, and that our obedience and nonconformity can happen only if we as a people maintain an identity with roots deep enough to sustain us.

The Education Thrust is a dialogue between educators and the people they serve. Certain reminders for both groups emerge which need acceptance before this effort can succeed.

Three questions to consider

The wider brotherhood needs to consider: (1) How far we've come from a pilgrim and strangers stance, and that our church life and personal values are becoming conformed to the popular protestantism which flourishes in our culture. (2) How badly we need critical self-evaluation. For example, what has changed us so much in the last generation? Has our current shape grown out of a desire to be faithful, or out of pervasive social and moral forces which push and pull? (3) That the view from our back porch is shaped by regional "hometown" forces, that Christian discipleship implies a broader view of human problems and social ethics.

In short, we need to confess the needs of our congregations.

The goals for educators and students

On the other hand, our educators and students need to consider:

(1) That a certain suspicion about higher education is wholesome. The powers we seek to understand are seductive and ultimately deadly. Art, history and science deal with how we order and explain our experiences. Yet we must say to our students that these disciplines, though worthwhile and not to be avoided, cannot provide our center or salvation. Possibly, our schools should not educate anyone in any given discipline further than their understanding of Christian faith. It's sad to see students with a mature understanding of a "secular" discipline reject faith on the basis of their immature understanding of it. Christian teaching must be in the same league with "secular" teaching.

(2) That we do not exist for the sake of enriching and stimulating a small segment of the brotherhood who might in turn enrich congregational life, but that the primary rationale for higher education is that our schools become servants of congregational obedience. Our schools are not shrines to human reason and creativity, but to the work of God among us. Understanding biblical faith and the experience of Christian community should be the center of each student's experience. These studies should be consciously related to the demands and goals of congregational life.

Unbounded hope for building the church

Both congregations and schools suffer from a popular individualism. Members of our churches often feel they can interpret faith and set priorities for themselves. And many students, often encouraged by faculty, suffer from the notion that "I exist to find the real me" and the truth that fits my needs and feelings. Our goal is not to release students' creative abilities so they may become beautiful people, but to equip saints for the upbuilding of the church.

While the Education Thrust will remind us of differences and divisions in our brotherhood, it is an effort based on hope. In the biblical tradition we may face our weaknesses squarely because of unbounded hope that God is still seeking and saving a people.

The styles of 'great teachers'

Cut flowers

By Samuel L. Yoder

S. L. Yoder is chairperson of the education department and professor of education. He has been at GC since 1961.

Teachers tend to spend too much time giving students cut flowers when they should be teaching them to grow their own plants. This evaluation of the state of the teaching art by John Gardner has provoked some instructors to reassess their teaching styles.

While cut flowers may come in neat arrangements and in glowing colors which may help brighten the day, they also become dated in lasting value. In fact, in many teaching situations, such neat arrangements soon become cut and dried. Contrast this with the idea of growing plants where something alive, active, and future oriented seems to be happening.

A dramatic change in the teacher's role

The role of the teacher in American education is experiencing a dramatic change. This is true not only on the more informal elementary level, but is now reaching secondary and higher education levels where traditional modes of teaching are often more deeply entrenched than is true on primary levels.

The act of teaching defies clear, concise definition since the concept of the task is couched primarily in observing what the teacher does, how the teacher acts, and what the teacher says. Some teachers are storehouses of knowledge and perform mainly from a pedestal. Others are facilitators and arrangers of the learning environment.

Student excitement and good teaching

Students frequently trace their excitement about a specific subject to the special way it was presented by a good teacher. Unfortunately, "great teachers" are rather rare nowadays and furthermore, there are limitations on how many students can "sit at their feet."

Therefore, the concept of teaching has been broadened to include the multiple learning arrangements now visible on all levels of formal education. Modern technology with its electronic devices and growing sensitivity to the economy of time and human resources has de-emphasized the size and composition of learning groups in favor of delivery systems reflecting more genuinely the "cult of efficiency" found in American industry.

The ends of the log, or the middle of the log

The Hopkins model, often cited as the ideal teacher-pupil setting, suggests a one-to-one and possibly face-to-face situation at opposite ends of a log. While this has some merits in technique, it would be more likely today to have teacher and pupil sit side by side at the middle of the log working through such aspects as behavioral objectives, delivery systems or methodology, and a humane way to assess the level of efficiency attained.

In the maze of teaching systems now considered operational, it is not uncommon for the instructor to experience some frustration. Conflicting data on teacher effectiveness, accountability, and performance-based evaluations fail to support a single model on the panacea to all teaching problems. Those who are searching for the "right model" will find the theories of John Stephans somewhat reassuring.

Teaching must fit teacher's style and personality

Stephan's theory of spontaneous schooling purports that teachers do best if they select teaching methods that fit their styles and personalities. Thus, the skilled lecturer should lecture while the organizer of learning materials and the facilitator of inquiry techniques should employ the appropriate methodology. Stephan's findings, over the years, suggest that the amount of learning remains fairly constant regardless of method used.

While the theory of spontaneous schooling has a good dimension of common-sense principles, there is ample evidence in the long and careful studies by Flanders, Ryans, Coleman and others that teacher personality reigns supreme in determining success/failure factors in the classroom.

Personality is of major importance

Personality seems to be the glue that binds the teaching act. Cold, aloof teachers tend not to experience the same degree of satisfaction and fulfillment in their jobs as is true of warm, caring teachers. Instructors who remain aloof and almost detached from their students sooner or later find teaching unpleasant. Sometimes students are regarded as the enemy and eventually this condition brings separation and tension. Extreme tension fractures the learning process.

These are the learning environments and classroom climates that lead critics to evaluate the education system as stifling, joyless places that stress obedience and conformity rather than spontaneity and creative thinking.

Students readily sense teachers' attitudes

In the academic arena, it is not unusual for teachers to develop a critical outlook on life. Professors are trained to be analytical — usually with an orientation that is more cognitive than affective. In a college community, it becomes rather easy to develop a "knock it" attitude. Debunking is a great national pastime and the campus is a setting ripe for deprecatory debate and disposition.

A prime example of this is the speaker who elicits a roar of laughter from the audience by referring to the Dick and Jane readers of a decade ago. While Dick and Jane may not be appropriate for the space age, the generation of youngsters who was nurtured on them has become the best readers yet in America.

Suffice it to say, teacher attitudes are emulated by students. Positive attitudes breed positive attitudes and values. Debunking begets debunking.

Humanizing education is humanizing the teacher

In recent years the stress has been on humanizing education. This really means humanizing the teacher. Goshen's new Humane Studies Program provides an excellent opportunity to develop greater and more meaningful student-professor relationships, enhance experiential learning, and provide current, relevant issues which give purpose to and direction in forming goals, values, and attitudes as well as skills that will equip students to find themselves in the society in which they participate. This is what humanizing is all about.

It will be easy to look to the Humane Studies instructors for leadership in this humanizing effort. It will be more difficult to carry the effort over into the "old" courses where prepared notes and outlines from last year are waiting in the folders to be used again and again.

Teaching points to the kingdom way

Teaching is the oil that moves the educational machinery. There is no shortage here at Goshen College. No need for rationing — only a need for more refinement for greater lubrication and better mileage both in and out of the classroom.

In the Goshen College Bulletin — 1974-76 Catalog, President Burkholder states, "Goshen is seeking to find a 'treasure.' It is the treasure described in the Gospels. It is the kingdom of God — a kingdom so elusive and yet present, so mysterious and yet real." Teachers are here to explore, find, and enjoy with students this kingdom of God. May the experience be more like tending a garden of growing plants than passing a bouquet of roses.

Gifts to '75 fund are for 'Great Teaching'

The current year-long alumni fund which began July 1 will center in gifts for Great Teaching. The theme was discussed by the Alumni Association board at its mid-June meeting and was developed further during the summer.

Accepting the national leadership of the '75 fund is Jocele Thut '50 Meyer, of Brooklyn, OH. Accepting volunteer posts beside her on the national fund committee are:

Sara Yoder '56 Frey, Elkhart, IN.
Lloyd N. Hostetler '35, Goshen, IN.
S. Jay Hostetler '23, Goshen, IN.
John M. Kolb '70, Goshen, IN.
Ellis D. Mast '62, Goshen, IN.
Verna Burkholder '40 Troyer, Goshen, IN.

Also serving on the committee is Daryl Nofziger '67, ex officio, director of alumni relations and executive secretary of the Alumni Association. The group will select agents for the classes and oversee the organization of the '75 phonothon.

The importance of the Great Teaching theme can be viewed from a number of perspectives. First — from the educational perspective — Great Teaching is the very reason for GC. Quality instruction, a climate of trust between teacher and student, and the shaping of values and ideals are GC at its best and at its very center.

Second is the financial perspective. The single biggest expense in the operations of the college is instructional. That is, salaries for teachers, be they part-time or full-time.

Because learning is the business of college, it is fitting that alumni support it. In helping provide teachers' salaries, their gifts will create the atmosphere that encourages and respects effective teaching. And for those teachers who are on institution-supported sabbaticals, the gifts will help provide professional growth and improvement.

Great Teaching will be discussed in a variety of ways in the coming months. In this Bulletin, for example, S. L. Yoder, chairperson and professor of education, writes on Great Teaching from his perspective. Other profs will be writing on teaching as they see it, in later issues.

Dean John A. Lapp wrote "What Makes Great Teaching," the pamphlet with Jocele Meyer's kick-off letter that will be mailed to all alumni in early October and November. Other pamphlets throughout the year will garner alumni, faculty and student responses to Great Teaching as they have known and experienced it.

The goal for gifts for Great Teaching is $215,000, a 7 per cent increase from last year's alumni response. A gift envelope is inserted elsewhere in the Bulletin for those who wish to be among the first to support the '75 cause.

After the TV show, the phone rang 78 times

By Verna Smith '34 Bishop

Verna Smith Bishop made her sixth trip to Korea in June to help escort 12 children to America. Husband George has accompanied her on three trips.

Welcome House is an adoption agency which has for the past 24 years been placing Korean and Korean-Caucasian children for adoption in the United States. I have been associated with this agency for the past 15 years as casework secretary. It became one of my responsibilities to go to Korea as an escort to help bring back these children to the United States for adoption.

Because of widespread interest in this program, Paul Cunningham of NBC-TV contacted our director and asked if they could feature Welcome House on their morning TODAY program. She agreed to this, and for several weeks in January their camera crew became involved with us at various times — by coming to our Doylestown office for an interview with our director, by visiting in an adoptive parents' home and talking with a Welcome House adoptive family, and by attending a group meeting of prospective adoptive parents in Doylestown. At all these places, videotaping was done to be used in the documentary at a later date.

The high light so far as human interest was concerned occurred the night of January 18, 1974, when the TODAY camera crew went to Chicago to board the plane which had on it a group of children arriving from Korea. The purpose of going to Chicago was to take pictures of these children on the last leg of their long journey from Seoul to New York.

As always, a group of us from Welcome House met the flight and helped bring the children off the plane to the waiting arms of their new parents. It was my happy privilege to be there that evening and to help in this heart warming experience.

The Welcome House program was featured on the morning of February 7, right after the 7:30 a.m. news and was on for about 15 minutes. I might add that it took about 14 hours of shooting videotape to produce a quarter hour for the TODAY show.

To give you an idea how well the nationwide telecast was received, as soon as I got to the office that morning, the phone started to ring and rang 78 times that day from people all over the United States who were touched by the program and wanted to know more. We were flooded with mail about the program in the days that followed regarding the bringing over from halfway around the world these very special children into loving adoptive homes in the United States.

GOSHEN COLLEGE BULLETIN
October, 1974 Vol. LXVIII. No. 6.
Published eight times a year in March, May, June, July, August, October, November, and December by Goshen College, 1700 S. Main St., Goshen, IN 46526. Second-class postage paid at Goshen, IN. Mervin D. Zook, editor. Litho in U.S.A. US ISSN 0017-2308.

Regional meetings are planned

The Elkhart (IN) regional club of the Alumni Association is planning a dinner and one-act comedy drama for Tuesday evening, Oct. 8, at Parkway Inn, of Elkhart.

Some 700 alumni and parents of students with addresses of Elkhart city and rural route have been invited by Delbert Detwiler '53, who is in charge of arrangements.

The evening features a choice of chicken, roast round of beef or swiss steak, and a play presented by the college drama department.

New this year at regional club meetings is: parents of current students will be invited as well as alumni.

The Elkhart club meeting is the first in the 1974-75 year. As the Bulletin goes to press, other fall meetings are being planned for clubs in Western Pennsylvania and Greater Washington, D.C. A number of meetings is set for next winter and spring.

Lime Tree Bay Resort and its waterfront invite alumni for an experience in marine biology.

Continuing education opportunities for alumni

Vera Smucker, a marine biology student last spring, cleans conch. Alumni have a special one-week opportunity to enjoy the Florida Keys next spring.

Four courses in the area of marine biology will be offered this spring on location at Layton, Florida. These four courses are "Biology of the Sea," "Marine Biology," "Advanced Biology," and "Ocean Life in the Florida Keys."

Biology of the Sea (Biol 210) and Marine Biology (Biol 304) are two courses designed for the non-science major and for the science major respectively. Both deal with the organisms found in the marine environment and with their relationships to that environment, but with more detail and investigative depth for the marine biology students. Prerequisites: For Biol 210 — Biological Principles, consent of instructors. For Biol 304 — Biological Principles and invertebrate zoology or consent of instructors. Both courses are offered twice: April 28-May 13 and May 29-June 13, and each yields four hours of credit.

Ocean Life in the Florida Keys is a non-credit "mini-term" course offered May 19-24 especially for adults — for instance, parents of students who have taken marine biology, or alumni or friends curious about the living sea. Group interests will guide the week's activities, which will include exploration of the marine environment and collection and examination of specimens.

Advanced Biology (Biol 400) will be offered May 29-June 13 of the 1975 spring trimester primarily for certain students who are qualified to do an in-depth study on a marine biological problem. This activity may be taken for from one to four hours of credit, but must be approved by the instructional staff.

All four courses will be led by C. Franklin Bishop and Jonathan Roth, professors of biology. These men have been teaching marine biology in the Florida Keys annually since 1966, so are well acquainted with both the subject and geographic study areas.

Students are housed at Lime Tree Bay Resort in air-conditioned rooms with light housekeeping facilities provided so that small groups do their own shopping and cooking. Also provided for participants' convenience and pleasure are shuffleboard, bicycles, and a fresh water swimming pool.

The lab facility features running sea water tanks for holding and observing live specimens, as well as equipment for testing the temperature, pH and salinity of the sea water. Boats are available for offshore explorations.

The number of participants is limited so inquiries and reservations should be made promptly. For more information write Department of Biology, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526.

Other offerings

Western Ireland. Two courses: one in writing the cross-cultural travel essay (May 22-June 13, three or four college credits, may be lower-level or upper-level); the other in Irish literature (July 10-August 1, three or four upper-level college credits). Each includes a week's village residence in an Irish-sponsored summer school, cross-country touring by 10-speed bicycle, and much exposure to rural folk-culture, archaeology, and history. A June-July study-and-work interim period may be available by arrangement. Leaders will be John J. Fisher, professor of English, and Jack E. Dueck, associate professor of English. For more information, write: Office of the Dean, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526. Reservations close Jan. 15, 1975.

Fine Arts in London. A study of music, painting, sculpture and architecture through visits to galleries, churches and historical buildings in and near London. Students will hear live performances to study music, tour galleries to see originals, and visit buildings and cathedrals to study architecture rather than rely on reproductions by recordings and pictures. Possible field trips to Canterbury, Coventry, Salisbury and Winchester to see cathedrals. Each student can pursue a particular subject of personal interest. Course may be taken for three lower-level or upper-level college credits. Leader will be Mary K. Oyer, professor of music and long-time instructor in campus-based fine arts courses. The course begins about July 10 and ends about Aug. 1, 1975. For more information, write: Office of the Dean, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526. Reservations close Jan. 15, 1975.

Modern Britain. An on-the-site study of the society of modern Britain and the artifacts that survive. A couple texts will be read and a few lectures given, but the major activities of the course will be guided and spontaneous experiencing of the country. Most of the time will be spent in London, but there will be a four-day trip into the country. Course may be taken for three or four upper level college credits. Class led by James R. Hertzler, associate professor of history. The course will begin on June 16 and end July 5, 1975. For more information, write: Office of the Dean, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526. Reservations close Jan. 15, 1975.

Help — we're losing track of our alumni

There's nothing wrong with moving to a new address or getting married and taking on new responsibilities. But the post office doesn't always inform the alumni office of the new address (despite several queries using post office forms and procedures).

Neither does the parson inform us of details of the happily wedded husband and wife, like where they're living.

So the Alumni Office has a "Missing Alumni Bureau" that needs help and clues. If you have the address or other information about any of the persons listed below, you'll make the Missing Alumni Bureau jump for joy.

You may use the coupon at the end of the list and the postage-paid envelope inserted elsewhere in this issue.

And, thanks tons for your helpfulness. Not only will missing alumni get back in touch with fellow alumni through the Bulletin, but also fellow alumni who ask about them at the Alumni Office will get the information they want.

High bridges and ramps serve motorists in 11 states

Calvin High '54, president, and S. Dale High '64, executive vice-president, were recently singled out by the Lancaster (PA) New Era for their development of innovative methods of steel fabrication and testing of welds.

The High brothers are officers of High Steel Structures, of which their father is chairman. The firm is one of the nation's fast growing steel fabricators and a pioneer in the ultrasonic testing of welds.

Although High fabricates steel for buildings, its specialty is bridges and ramps. Today, its bridges and ramps can be found in 11 states east of the Mississippi.

High Steel takes unusual precautions. Huge steel girders for bridges and ramps are first assembled at the plant to make sure everything fits within a fraction of an inch. Then they are disassembled, loaded onto trucks or railroad cars, and shipped to their permanent site.

About 55,000 tons of steel go through the High fabricating plants and are shipped out to 300 projects each year. More than 500 employees working on two shifts comprise the work force. The company has four buildings totaling 260,000 square feet, 26 overhead shop cranes and 130 vehicles. Although High Steel has always been a thriving company, it didn't boom dramatically until the last few years. Helping bring on the tremendous growth was their development of the heat shrinking method to fabricate steel. The method eliminated steel waste and made operations more economical.

Another reason was High's pioneering in ultrasonic testing of welds. The firm adapted the idea from the aircraft manufacturing industry, which for years had used ultrasonics to test critical welds.

The older way of testing was X-rays, and work had to be stopped and employees had to leave the area because of potential danger from radiation. Because ultrasonics doesn't involve radiation, there is more efficiency and thus more economy.

In addition to steel — their chief interest — the High family has branched into related businesses to construct and lease commercial and industrial buildings and operate industrial parks. But their biggest projects are quality bridges that include the 7,500-tons span over the Susquehanna River between Columbia and Wrightsville, PA, and the 8,000-tons Sparrow's Point Viaduct in Maryland.

A memorial that lives on and on

. . . in your name
. . . in honor of a loved one

So often and for so many, the emotion of the occasion can overrule better judgment. Before you decide on an appropriate memorial, we suggest that you explore first. A time-honored choice is a gift that serves persons or a worthy cause.

The true measure of a Christian memorial is that it shall do Christian work. One idea for a memorial gift is a book (or books) for the Good Library at Goshen College.

The name of the person you honor and your name will appear on a specially designed bookplate as a permanent thanksgiving. Further, there will be recognition in the Bulletin.

The effect of a memorial gift is something beyond the ordinary. It honors the person not just for a moment but for years to come. The book (or books) in the Good Library will be provided for daily use by students and faculty. Long after your gift is made, the gift is benefitting students and teachers who will be serving mankind far into the future.

For further information about the new Memorial and Tribute Gifts program or to pay tribute to a loved one, use the coupon below.

Mail to:
Daniel E. Kauffman, Director of College Relations
Goshen College
Goshen, IN 46526

( ) Please send me more information about Tribute Gifts and opportunities for memorial gifts.

( ) A gift of $. . . . . is enclosed to pay tribute to . . . .
(Print name in full. The name will be published in the Bulletin and will be personalized on the bookplate of a library book.)

For every $25 multiple in your gift, a book is provided and processed for the library.

Name . . . .

Address . . . .

City . . . .

State . . . . Zip . . . .

All Memorial and Tribute Gifts are tax deductible and will be promptly acknowledged. The amount of gift is never mentioned in any publicity or on the memorial bookplate.

Jocele Meyer named '75 Fund chairperson

Jocele Thut '50 Meyer, of Brooklyn, OH, has accepted the chair to lead the '75 fund-gathering for Goshen College among alumni.

In articulating her position about her alma mater, Mrs. Meyer says:

"Believing that Goshen College has a unique role in higher education from a Christian perspective, I wholeheartedly support its goals, standards and objectives. The activities and accomplishments of its students and faculty are of concern to me, too.

"The financial position of the small, private college today is critical. It is imperative that those of us who believe in the importance of Christian education at GC give support — in active concern and with financial gifts."

As the Bulletin goes to press, Mrs. Meyer and the Alumni Association organization are selecting the national fund committee and the theme for the 1975 effort. Information about the fund and its progress throughout the year will be included in future issues of the Bulletin and in direct-mail pieces.

In home, church and community activities, Mrs. Meyer is mother of two sons and a daughter, and wife to Arthur D. '50. The elder son Jerold was graduated from GC in 1974 and will be studying medicine at the Medical College of Ohio, Toledo, this fall. The younger son Ronald will be a senior at GC this fall and is co-majoring in music and communication. Daughter Ann is a senior at Brooklyn High and has a variety of interests. Husband Art, a high school science teacher, received one of the 11 nationally coveted awards in science in 1974 known as STAR, Science Teaching Awards Recognition.

Continuing about her family, Mrs. Meyer speaks of family hobbies like camping and backpacking. A summer project was rebuilding and replanting a strip-mined farm in southeastern Ohio.

In addition to her family activities and recently acquired volunteer position in the alumni fund, she is denominationwide Women's Missionary and Service Commission president. She accepted that post a year ago.

Nofziger assumes directorship

"Last week I caught an apprentice burglar. He was just breaking in." — Herb Caen,
San Francisco Chronicle

As the new director of alumni relations at Goshen College, Daryl J. Nofziger '67 has been "breaking in" since July 1.

"Breaking in" is a fascinating process. For Nofziger there is that sense of unspeakable challenge, that air of anticipation over the day's discoveries and surprises that an "old-hat" assignment never brings. "Breaking in" is fun — as long as you don't get caught at it, that is.

The first few weeks

During the first few weeks at his new job, Nofziger says he has been impressed by alumni mail.

"Out there they feel the same way I do about GC. Their gifts and letters give me a good indication how supportive is their feeling. I get positive feedback from alumni who are now a part of the faculty. It is reassuring to know that many share my belief for GC," Nofziger says.

Replaces John K. Hershberger

When "broken in," Nofziger will fully assume the assignment of his predecessor, John K. Hershberger '72, who was awarded a Rockefeller Fellowship for one year of study at Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries. Nofziger will plan and carry out programs that interpret GC to alumni as well as serve alumni wherever they may be in the world.

Nofziger will work closely with the executive board and the board of directors of the Alumni Association. He will oversee the publishing of the Newsletter edition of the Bulletin, coordinate the Alumni Annual Fund and the efforts of its volunteer leaders and workers, and help arrange meetings for the regional clubs of the Alumni Association.

Native of Archbold, Ohio

Originally from Archbold, OH, Nofziger moved with his parents to Goshen in 1951. Since graduation from GC in 1967, Nofziger managed Provident Bookstores in Scottdale, PA, and Bloomington, IL. He is 32 years old.

Nofziger is married to the former Elizabeth Ann Yoder, a 1965 GC graduate from West Liberty, Ohio. She is a registered nurse and has been an instructor at Mennonite Hospital School of Nursing, Bloomington, IL. The Nofzigers have two children, Jennifer, 4, and Matthew, 2.

Clubs install officers

At the Northwest Ohio regional club meeting, May 16, and at the Greater Eastern Pennsylvania meeting, April 27, officers were chosen for '74-'75 activities.

Now serving the Northwest Ohio club are Ed Diener '43, president; Elwood Graber '50, vice-president; Cara Frey '55 Ulrich, secretary-treasurer; and Helen Eicher '55 Weldy, nominating committee. Last year's officers were Don Jantzi, president; Ed Diener, vice-president; Mona Nofziger '65 Sauder, secretary-treasurer; Lowell Short, nominating committee. Forty attended and heard J. Lawrence Burkholder, GC president, on the topic of the church college, its goals and future. A question and answer period followed.

The officers serving the Greater Eastern Pennsylvania club for '74-'75 are Cal Britsch '69, chairman; Mike Lambright '68, chairman-elect; and Jeanette Eicher '71 Rice, secretary-treasurer. At the meeting last April Jack Dueck, associate professor of English, was the speaker, and Ralph '56 and Ina Moyer Hunsberger were recognized for their outstanding work in the alumni program to recruit students.

'Circle letter' of '46 reunites

A group of '46 alumni who have circulated a circle letter since college days met at Camp Amigo, Sturgis, MI, June 1 and 2 for a "mini-reunion."

In addition to reminiscing over old pictures and catching up with the present, they enjoyed volleyball, boating, swimming and singing together. For Sunday morning worship, about half those present were in the cast of a play about Jeremiah written by John Miller.

Present were Winifred Erb '46 Paul, Milford and sons Roger and Greg, Scottdale, PA; Elizabeth Hershberger '46 Bauman, Harold and daughter Becky and son David, Goshen; Mary Kay Plank '46 King and Donald, West Liberty, OH; Wilma Yoder '46 Yoder and Roy, West Liberty, OH; Carolyn Weaver '46 Hertzler, Paul, and daughter Nancy, Goshen, IN; Carol Schertz '46 Oyer, John, and son Tim, Goshen, IN; and Wilma Hollopeter '46 Shank, Dave, and daughter Rachel, whose address is Goshen between terms of missionary service in Belgium and Africa.

In the circle but unable to attend were Rosalie Hooley '46 Yoder, Akron, OH; Ruth Kreider '46 Heatwole, Charlottesville, VA; and Doris Miller '46 Glick, Hattiesburg, MS.

'Pert' Shetler '72 in Orient as Sports Ambassador

At Bethany Christian High, 'Pert' teaches girls' softball.

As the Bulletin goes to press, 5-3 Linda Miller Shetler '72, more affectionately known as Pert, is winding up a 50-game tour of the Orient in a program known as Sports Ambassadors.

Pert, described by the Goshen News as a "spark-plug guard in a very successful era of girls' basketball," was first in point totals every one of the three years she played for the Maple Leafs. The small, quick co-captain — No. 23 — was respected by GC's opponents not only for her abilities but also sparkling personality.

Pert had a sure outside shot and an uncanny ability to make layups in a fast-break situation, Coach Ruth Gunden recalls with pleasure.

Basketball and Bibles

She and nine other young women were hand picked last spring to combine basketball with Bibles in witnessing and winning persons to Jesus Christ. If this year's squad plays before crowds like last year's, more than 200,000 persons will witness this unusual ministry of sports and faith. Many contests are televised or broadcast by radio.

At each halftime the audiences, some of which have numbered up to 12,000 at one sitting, get a special treat. The team members sing, play musical instruments, give personal testimonies and messages from the Bible.

Before the grueling five-weeks schedule this summer overseas, Pert underwent rigorous conditioning in the spring. Training to run a six-minute mile not only developed endurance but also shed some weight. She practiced basketball, freethrows and scrimmaging with Husband Stan for hours on end. Every morning from 7 to 8 for about a month she worked out with four Bethany teachers, and she feels a debt of gratitude to the wives of Rick Stiffney, Larion Swartzendruber, Al Peachey and Dan Bodiker who got their husbands breakfast and allowed them to scrimmage with her. It was a real help, she says.

Above and beyond all this, she was required to raise $1500 to cover her own expenses. Friends, relatives, faculty and student body at Bethany, her church, and former GC classmates gave generously to help cover her transportation, lodging, food, uniforms, brochures, equipment, set-up, and other items for the goodwill mission. She is grateful to all those who supported her with gifts and prayers.

Her prayer was answered

Pert's personal testimony on how God has worked in her life is short and to the point. For one thing, last winter after her interview and tryout for the overseas team, she committed to God her abilities and deep desire to go on the Orient tour. The deadline of March 1 for notification passed, and she had given up. But God hadn't, and He called her to the team seven weeks later.

Pert continues, "To me, God is a very personal being. He is with me every day of my life; helping me make decisions, big or small, important and unimportant; guiding me in whichever way He thinks best. Some days when I was working out trying to get in condition, I just felt like giving up — my legs were killing me and I thought to myself, 'Is it worth it all?' It was during those times that God gave me the strength to keep going. If He knew I could do it, then I did it. It's really neat to know He's with me all the time if I only allow Him the time and space. God is for real! We must let Him make Himself real through us, so others can see His reality."

Fiscal 1974 is 35th consecutive year with no operating deficit

When the books were balanced for the fiscal year that closed June 30, 1974, the net gain in operations was $1738 (unaudited as Bulletin goes to press). It is a small margin on a $4.2 million operating budget, but its significance is: the college closed another year — its 35th consecutive one — without a deficit.

In other statistical reporting, the class of '72 takes top honors in the biggest increase in donors in '74, as compared to '73. The increase was 12. Percentagewise, the class of '29 had a 12 per cent increase in percentage of donor participation and the class of '32 had a 9 per cent increase. Other statistics are tabulated elsewhere on the Honor Roll pages in this issue.

Position open

Goshen College has an immediate job opening for a person with administrative secretarial skills. This person would provide secretarial service for the Dean's Office. The job requires a person with strong secretarial background and long term availability. Alumni wrote it

Since we consider GC to be a really vital part of the Mennonite outreach to young people, we feel good giving what we can when we can.

Mark '71 and Vicki Yoder '71 Smucker
Chicago, IL

Goshen meant much to me as a student and I still believe in those who make Goshen what it is. May God richly bless.

Esther Bixler Heatwole '53
LaJunta, CO

My gift is a token of the appreciation I feel for the professors of the college for their vision and creativity in facing the problems of education for the future. . . I felt I should write my feelings about Goshen and my gratitude for the education I received there, after reading a recent letter in the Bulletin, which stated in effect, that the writer felt GC had lost the vision of Christian education. I most positively feel that many GC students I know are more concerned about other people, and more aware of the needs of the world, and more ready to do something about those needs than was the case even 10 years ago. Keep on.

Janice Nafziger '63
Chicago, IL

There is an occasional criticism which one reads in the Bulletin. I can only say that we, the rest of us, may be at fault in not supporting the college as we should. The Christian college today is to be given every encouragement seasoned with much prayer to "keep going." Christian principles and sound constructive traditions are so greatly needed today in higher education.

Mary Frey '35
Hays, KS

I just returned from Goshen and 25th year reunion and related activities. I did enjoy this seeing of people — and the reminder that Goshen College has been one of the really important shapers of my life — and that I'm really glad that it has been.

I do have a suggestion. It has occurred to me that it would be very helpful to know where other classmates are and what they have found important enough to be doing — that is, in addition to those attending our 25th year reunion. I would like to know where they are and what they are doing and what is important to them and how God is working in their community and life. I felt it important enough to me to "go and see." But now I'd like to know about the others — those who did not find it possible to be present.

Editor's Note: An alumni directory to update the 1951 edition has been proposed to give some information about all alumni. The project is currently under study in connection with the computerization of alumni records.

THE 1974 ALUMNI HONOR ROLL

Thank you for underlying strength

As the Bulletin goes to press, I am about to be off to Poland to visit our first Study-Service Trimester unit there. But before leaving, I want to thank you for the fine gift support through the 1974 Alumni Fund. It is one of the reassuring aspects of my job to respond to such deep loyalty and generosity.

A college must have students and authentic programs to attract them. But an important underlying strength in providing education is the gifts and voluntary support and good will of masses of people — of alumni, of church, of business and industry, of friends and foundations.

The average gift in the 1974 Alumni Fund was $1.50 higher than last year. The increase came in a year that offered no Challenge Match as was provided in 1973.

J. Lawrence Burkholder
President

Alumni gave $200,355

On this page and following are the names of those 3,060 alumni who gave a total of $200,355.33 for the benefit of Goshen College in the fiscal year, July 1, 1973, through June 30, 1974.

There were gifts from almost every state, every province of Canada, and many foreign countries.

The alumni honor roll has been published annually since 1967 to give the donors a measure of recognition they so well deserve.

If your name does not appear or is incorrectly recorded, or if you requested your name to be withheld but it is listed, we ask you to excuse us and request you to provide us with the correct information.

Alumni are reminded that the 1974 Alumni Fund was conducted during the College's fiscal year, July 1, 1973, to June 30, 1974. Gifts received during this 12-months period are considered part of the 1974 Alumni Fund.

Roll for '75 has begun

If you would like to join the 1975 honor roll, all you need to do is to make a gift of any sort to Goshen College through the Alumni Annual Fund.

The 1975 Fund is being conducted during the college's fiscal year, July 1, 1974, through June 30, 1975, and all gifts received during this 12-months period will be listed on next year's honor roll.

Your gift may be cash, check, or in the form of securities, real property, objects of art, or books. When the annual report for 1975 is published, your name will be listed, but not the amount of the gift.

Remember, every gift of any sort is sincerely appreciated.

Auxiliary is behind the scenes

Thanks to the Goshen College Auxiliary and its volunteer help on a special work day, the last '74 Fund request for alumni gifts was put in the mail on schedule. Helping stuff the envelopes and prepare the mailing were: (left to right) Howard C. Yoder '22, Phyllis Ramseyer '55 Miller, Rhonda Clemens, Ethel Good '24 Yoder, Karen Miller, Opal Barkey '45 Gunden, Helen Yoder '33 Leichty, Harriet Lapp '37 Burkholder, Edith Yoder '43 Kauffman, Nellie Miller '31 Ebersole, Oma Hershberger '47 Smucker, Allen Ebersole '30, Tilman Smith '28, national fund chairman, and Ruth Blosser '17 Miller. Other spring and summer projects of the auxiliary were care of the campus flower gardens and the preparation of mailings to recruit students for the Admissions Office.

'Tribute Gifts' number 48 in year

Gifts in honor or in memory of respected individuals have been received at Goshen College for many years. The thoughtfulness of donors has made possible, among other things, a strengthened endowment, new music instruments, and special acquisitions in the library. Gifts in honor or in memory may cover a variety of occasions — to honor a former teacher, to perpetuate the memory of a loved one, to express appreciation for a kindness, to celebrate a birthday or wedding anniversary. The name Goshen has chosen for these many kinds of expressions is Tribute Gifts.

Gifts received July 1, 1973, through June 30, 1974, were from:

John E. '67 and Vivian King '68 Adams, in tribute to Kim W. '70 and Ellen E. Hernley '68 Swanson.
Agnes H. Anderson '23, in memory of her sister, Mrs. Margaret Anderson Morse '22.
Ruth Mendenhall '44 Barrett, in tribute to Glen R. Miller:
Jack R. '72 and Beth Swanson '73 Bechtel, in tribute to Kim W. '70 and Ellen E. Hernley '68 Swanson.
Ervin Jr. '59 and Phyllis Lauver '59 Beck, in memory of S. A. Yoder '28.

Mary E. Bender '50, in memory of S. A. Yoder '28.
W. Phillips '49 and Ercie Humble Berwick, in tribute to S. C. Yoder.
Wilbur J. '63 and Fanni Marner '73 Birky, in memory of S. A. Yoder '28.
Olen L. and Irene Wyse '35 Britsch, to provide an endowed scholarship that was named in their honor.
John L. and Brook Swanson '70 Carl, in tribute to Kim W. '70 and Ellen E. Hernley '68 Swanson.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Ditto, in memory of his parents, George and Orpha Ditto, and in honor of their uncle, Glen E. Yoder.
Dr. and Mrs. William E. Ditto, in memory of his parents, George and Orpha Ditto, and in honor of their uncle, Glen E. Yoder.
Jack E. and Eleanor Toews '72 Dueck, in memory of S. A. Yoder '28.
Fannie Ebersole '06, in memory of J. D. Brunk '15.

John J. '48 and Pauline Clemens '48 Fisher, in memory of S. A. Yoder '28.
S. J. and Bonnie Herrington '53 Fisher, to provide a student loan fund that was named in their honor.
Paul and Catherine Hernley '46 Glenn, in tribute to Kim W. '70 and Ellen E. Hernley '68 Swanson.

Twenty-five corporations match employees' gifts in '74 Fund

More than 500 corporations have programs which match the gifts of their employees to colleges and universities. Goshen College is pleased to acknowledge the following 25 companies which matched contributions of alumni and friends to the '74 Fund.

Each year additional corporations begin participation in this important program. All alumni, parents and friends of Goshen are urged to check with their employer to find out if a matching program is available. The college is indeed grateful to both the corporations and individuals who are providing this valuable source of income.

Thank you, volunteers

It is Goshen's good fortune to have a strong working corps of volunteers. These persons served in a variety of capacities during the past fiscal year: as members of the Alumni Association board of directors and executive board, as members of the fund, nominating and alumni relations committees, as class agents and phonothon workers for the 1974 Fund, as alumni recruiters in the admissions program, and as chairpersons, organizers, and members of committees for class reunions and regional club meetings.

Undoubtedly there are many others who gave valuable helpful assistance, but whose names were not jotted down or submitted for publication. To those silent, unknown volunteers, warm thanks is extended as well. If any will step forward, the Alumni Office will be pleased to correct its list and re-arrange its procedure for gathering such names in the future.

*An asterisk denotes non-alumnus volunteer.

S. C. Yoder, who became, president in 1924, is honored at golden anniversary dinner

June 14 was an evening honoring S. C. Yoder, (second from right) 94-years-old president emeritus. Fifty years earlier (1924) he had assumed the presidency and during his tenure he unified church and alumni.

At the head table he was flanked by his daughter, LaVerne Yoder '34 Hostetler (left), and his grandson, Mike Hostetler '68. At far left is J. Lawrence Burkholder '39, GC president. Former students, friends and family present for the evening numbered 280.

Because of a tornado warning, no addresses could be delivered. However, the main address of the evening — by Guy F. Hershberger, professor emeritus of history — plus short tributes and other articles have been printed in a book. A limited number is available free from Alumni Office.

Keeping up with the faculty

(For convenience of alumni readers, years of service appear in parentheses after each faculty person's name.)

Alfred J. Albrecht '50 (1964-), professor of communication, will be on a sabbatical next year. He will make recordings of Mennonite preaching to describe and evaluate it, and research Quaker-Mennonite opposition to slavery during the 17th century.

Georges Aubert (1974-), from Lausanne, Switzerland, will be assistant professor of music. Since 1965 he has been organist and choirmaster at Templehof, Berlin, Germany.

Mary E. Bender '50 (1955-), professor of French, will be on a sabbatical next year. She will study literature, primarily 20th century fiction, in the fall. She plans to study in France in the spring.

Joanne Sprunger Brown '74 (1974-) will be instructor in nursing. She will teach psychiatric nursing on a part-time basis.

Teaching in Costa Rica

J. R. Burkholder '52 (1963-), professor of religion and director of peace studies, will be on a sabbatical. He will be visiting professor of social ethics at Seminario Biblico Latinamericano in San Jose, Costa Rica, during the winter and spring of 1975. Next July and August the Burkholder family plans to visit mission and church activities in Colombia, Brazil, Argentina and Bolivia.

Philip K. Clemens '63 (1965-66; 1970-), assistant professor of music, had two of his organ compositions selected for performance in a program of original works in Indianapolis in May. Clemens performed the works in the concert, sponsored by the Indianapolis chapter of the American Guild of Organists.

Evelyn Driver (1974-), a clinical instructor of the Waynesboro (VA) School of Practical Nursing, 1968-73, and a candidate for the M.S. at U. of Maryland at Baltimore, will be assistant professor of nursing.

To build business curriculum

Rudy Dyck (1974-), with years of experience in a growing family business in Canada, will be visiting lecturer in business. He will help build the new business curriculum that focuses on management of the small, or family, or independent business.

David Falk (1965-72), former associate professor of music, has been appointed to the music faculty of Wilfrid Laurier U. (formerly Waterloo Lutheran U.), of Ontario.

John J. Fisher '48 (1953-), professor of English, is at U. of California at Santa Cruz, this summer at a seminar, "The Renaissance Imagination," underwritten by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Ida A. Gross '63 (1969-), assistant professor of nursing, is the new secretary for the Mennonite Nurses Association. She co-chaired the nurses sectional meeting at the Mennonite Health Assembly in San Francisco in March.

Serigraph places in exhibition

Abner H. Hershberger '60 (1965-), associate professor of art, had his "Dakota Image No. 4" accepted for hanging in the Indiana State Museum Inaugural Fine Arts Exhibition at Indianapolis this summer. His acrylic work was one of 26 chosen from among 400 entries. A one-man show of 12 of Hershberger's serigraphs is currently a traveling exhibition in the cities of San Salvador, San Jose, and Tegucigalpa, all Central American capitals. Many of the serigraphs have won U.S. art exhibition awards in the past five years.

Anna R. Weaver Hertzler, wife of Silas Hertzler '13 (1920-58), died May 4 at Baptist Hospital, Phoenix, AZ. Hertzler is professor emeritus of education and psychology.

John D. Ingold '59 (1964-), professor of physical education, will be on sabbatical spring and summer 1975 to develop a stress and exercise program to determine physical tolerance in individuals.

Carolyn Yousey '69 Kauffman (1974-), who had been teaching pediatrics and obstetrics at Hesston College, will be instructor in nursing.

A special service for those interested in benefitting future generations

Heritage . . . planned giving programs

Now there are special ways to give to Christian higher education and at the same time provide income for your future. Through Heritage programs, you can put your assets to work for the church. At the same time you can receive generous income returns, tax benefits and the joy of a new, lifelong relationship with an institution who wants to serve all — rich and poor, young and old, Americans and foreign peoples.

The Heritage programs are a service to aid you in your family financial planning. Giving by way of a Heritage program is giving that is planned in the true sense of the word. It allows you to consider the financial needs of your family at the same time you consider a gift to aid some area of the work of the kingdom.

A planned gift, like every gift, has a cost. But the actual cost to you and your family will be substantially lower with proper planning.

The Heritage service includes guidance and information on estate planning, wills, life income gifts, trusts, gift annuity agreements, and many other giving methods. These giving plans may provide many benefits to you, such as —

- * Generous income
- * Savings in taxes
- * Relief from management of assets
- * Expression of gratitude for the goodness of the Heavenly Father
- * Satisfaction of contributing to God's work among future generations

The first goal of the Heritage program is service. Goshen College believes that if it can help you to provide for your family and to conserve your assets, you will in turn be in a position to provide far more support to kingdom work than you ever dreamed possible.

A new day

By J. Lawrence Burkholder

The year 1975 has been designated by the General Board of the Mennonite Church as a year to reflect upon the role of Christian education in the life of the church. This new initiative being assumed by the Mennonite Board of Education will be churchwide. A so-called "thrust" for education will bring together administrators, church leaders, pastors, teachers, students and laity at various locations to discuss what kind of education is needed and how our educational institutions may better serve the churches. The "thrust," which is the sole emphasis of this Bulletin's articles, could inaugurate a new day for Mennonite education.

To get started the Board of Education has been contacting various church conferences and has proposed several basic concepts of Christian education for consideration. For example, Albert Meyer has coined the term "people education." The main idea is that a Christian educational institution is intended to serve the people of God. This means that the curriculum, faculty, administration and general atmosphere of the school must be determined by what the church at the grass roots needs rather than by what may be current in the educational scene.

Some influences of a college on its church

It can be pointed out that many church leaders including 95 per cent of (Old) Mennonite missionaries are products of our church colleges. It can also be pointed out that many ideas and much of the language of the church have originated on our college campuses. When one stops to think about it, the influences of the colleges upon the churches have been profound. However, here at Goshen, we would be the last to suggest that we know what "servanthood" and "brotherhood" really means for a church college. Nevertheless, we are trying to relate to the church more closely and we anticipate the "thrust" as a most significant step forward in this relationship.

Some may wonder, however, whether the emphasis upon "people education" may not result in a narrow sectarian approach. Will attempts to draw closer to the churches place intellectual, psychological and social limits upon the educational program? The answer lies in the kind of education that is proposed. I like to think that Mennonite education contains two tendencies which correspond to two tendencies in the gospel as observed by the famous sociologist Troeltsch. There is a tendency toward "absolute individualism" by which he meant the necessity for Christians to pursue the will of God independently as a distinct and self-determined community. They are a self-conscious sub-community of society. The other tendency is toward "absolute universality" by which he meant the tendency to identify with the world and its institutions since God rules over all.

A desire to strengthen ties

Goshen College wishes to align itself closer with the church as a brotherhood. However, the brotherhood is intended to serve the world. Hence Goshen will continue to strengthen those ties which reinforce its integrity as a community. At the same time Goshen will help introduce students to the world. Very few colleges in America express concurrently tendencies toward community and involvement in the world as does Goshen College. On the one hand, Goshen emphasizes discipline, chapel, Koinonia groups, counseling and personal student-faculty relationships. On the other hand, Goshen emphasizes international education, such as SST and Goshen in Europe, voluntary service, and service professions.

One of the unique characteristics of American society is the way it accommodates, indeed depends upon, private institutions in many areas of life which in Europe are assumed by government or by a single "established church." The resulting pluralism is the matrix within which Mennonite education like Quaker education, Lutheran and Catholic education, may serve society at large by emphasizing its best intrinsic qualities.

J. Lawrence Burkholder is president and professor of Bible and philosophy at Goshen College.

The vision for the people

By Paul M. Gingrich

Education in the believers church grows out of the biblical faith of a people. It assumes life qualities and values not found in state education. The starting point for believers church educators has not been a secular world view with cues taken from the prevailing national culture. Rather, our forebears perceived that the distinctive qualities of religious faith must be preserved as an alternative to the state institutions. They believed that learning about the world through the sciences and arts is important but must be set in the context of the people's faith and distinctive view of life.

God's people — those who choose to follow Jesus as Lord and build His new creation — are in the world, but ignorance of that world is not a mark of obedience. Ignorance may actually be a mark of disobedience. Howard Charles has written, "Read the Gospels and notice how often Jesus appealed to His hearers to use their heads. Unbelief can be a matter of too little critical thought and not, as some think, only the product of too much intellectual activity."

Now, after 80 years, our forebears have passed on and those who carried their dreams are retiring. We must pause to ask, "Are we being faithful to the vision?" To test faithfulness, the vision must be understood.

Some bold strokes of the vision

The vision is set securely in the belief that all people may choose to live as God's peculiar people. Examples of those who chose reach back to Abraham and forward to the end of the age. God broke into history in the person of Jesus, who introduced a new option, a new order of things, a new kingdom. He launched a movement counter to the systems of the world — the God-movement. His way gives life in the community of a new people.

Jesus' option is hope and good news. The motif for His life-style is servant rather than master, submission rather than oppression, suffering rather than protection and defensiveness. He gives freedom to the oppressed. He grants deliverance to the spirits of people bound by fear, despair and racial prejudice. His healing touch is one of liberation for those who had no self-worth. While Jesus frees some, others become oppressors, masters in control expecting to be served rather than serve.

The new life-style has a definite objective: to make persons whole, to give soul to those who had lost their souls, to give life to those in the pathway of death. This life-style is not theory. It has been validated by Jesus' own life, the way of the servant of suffering love. Jesus calls us to follow with our lives.

Life in the new vision

Those who follow, choose to follow, aware of the consequences. They live in creative relationships with one another. These are not individuals spotted around the world each operating alone for

Paul M. Gingrich, acting director of the Center for Discipleship, has been working with laymen, students, pastors and faculty to articulate the issues confronting the believers church in today's world. Before joining the GC staff in 1970 as director of church relations, he was a missionary administrator in Ethiopia.

The vision for the people

themselves. Rather, these are a people who believe that the way of faithfulness under the Spirit can only be found as they search for that way together in the Word. Mutual dependence, mutual nurture, mutual caring, mutual sharing and mutual counsel and proclamation are their way of life.

These people are a new nation set among the nations roundabout. They become a living witness (martyr) that God is alive and present. They validate the resurrected Jesus. They live by different signals — asking how will each act build the kingdom of God. They affirm life rather than death. They care for others. They place persons before things. Their priorities become a challenge and judgment on the present world order. In refusing to accept the sub-Christian life-practice of the world at large, they may experience persecution.

Suffering love, the way of the cross, always stands in the narrow space between hostile forces. It risks the focus of hostility from both sides to re-present the Christ-like way of love. Under the Spirit, the discerning community has deep concern for broken relationships. When there is need, there is sharing. Where there is hurt, there are attempts to bring healing. When there is estrangement, there are efforts to reconcile. This action in word and deed is at the center of the vision.

Transmitting the vision at a college

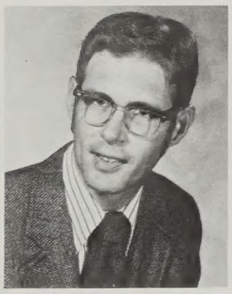
To be sure, what is taught about the vision through word and lecture is only one part of education. What is taught by style of administration and the manner of life of the teacher is important also.

Beyond this, education starts before college and goes over and above it. Faith education begins in the home and church and is set in a people's way of life, their values and priorities.

When the forebears conceived the idea to do "college," they were not a small group of interested church people aiming to run a college as a private business for themselves. Their vision was to train people in the way of the kingdom. They wanted their sons and daughters to learn the sciences and the arts in the context of kingdom faith. This vision lies at the heart of education at Goshen. It is a call, under the power of the Spirit, to become a servant people, to live in brotherhood, to reconcile all, to proclaim constantly Jesus is Lord. Can the people today covenant together as a community to follow this vision? The writer of Proverbs suggests the alternative, "Where there is no vision, the people perish" (Prov. 29:18).

Education that comes from a people's vision

By Albert J. Meyer



When Jesus said, "I am the truth . . .," He was not speaking of abstract values or of something that could be discovered in scientific observation, but of a kind of truth that could be incarnate in a person, and, more generally, in a people. "People truth" has meaning in every area of life, in relationships to God and with His covenant people.

A people, or church, with a distinctive biblical vision can survive only if it shows an interest in the way its young people catch the vision — that is, in the education of young people. A school — or college — for this people must be viewed within the vision and purposes and life of its people. Further growth and faithfulness of the people depend to a great extent on how the vision is carried out in education. The purposes, program, and curriculum of a college, and the structure and shape of the education, must reflect the people's basic convictions and understandings.

Curriculum

Given the vision as Gingrich described it elsewhere in this Bulletin, what should be talked about and taught and learned in the Mennonite academic community? In the believers church view, the content of the curriculum is not basically an inherited body of knowledge that comes from the Greeks, or experimental findings from purely professional and disciplinary sources. The agenda and content of the educational conversation depends on who the teachers and learners are and what they think is worth talking about in the context of their purposes as God's people. It will differ from time to time and from place to place.

The curricular structure and content have to flow with integrity out of what the faculty as a Christian community thinks is important, and out of the faculty-student community interactions at the institution.

This is not the way curricula are usually built in American educational institutions. Ordinarily, the curriculum is a product of an extended faculty log-rolling process — "I'll vote for your physical science course requirement, if you'll vote for my American government."

This kind of a process is not adequate in a Mennonite school. The professor of government or English had better know what is going on in the physical science course and believe in it if he wants to participate in requiring it for students.

The professionalization of college and university faculties of the past half-century has brought benefits but that professionalization and disciplinary fragmentation have also brought major problems. These problems have to be discussed openly and dealt with in American higher education generally, and certainly in a faculty that calls itself a Christian community.

Spiritual community

If there is to be a focus on people-truth in our schools, students will have to see this lived on the campus and have a chance to take part in the experience themselves. Biblical and historical studies have their place. But students have to see the vision lived and have a chance to live in it themselves if they are to understand what this means in our time.

None of us has all the answers when we ask about the shape the God-movement should take on a school campus. What experiences do students find on our campuses in living out the believers church vision? The vision taught in our congregations and schools must take shape in our campus life.

This kind of spiritual community must take place first among faculty members if it is to be realized on campus in the larger community of faculty members and students. What shape should the God-movement take on our college campuses, when there are 300 to 450 new students each year? Possibly we need a number of strong communities of God's people on a given campus.

When we think of bringing young members of God's people together for corporate experiences in the God-movement during the late adolescent years, we can see significant opportunities. We also have to reckon realistically, however, with the problems in providing interactions with enough experienced

Since 1967 Albert J. Meyer has been executive secretary and director of educational development of the denomination-wide Mennonite Board of Education. When an undergraduate at GC, he began to study the believers church and he continued this work while in doctoral and postdoctoral studies in physics at Princeton University and at the University of Basel, Switzerland. He is a former European representative of the Mennonite Central Committee Peace Section and former executive secretary of the Puidoux Theological Conferences on the Lordship of Christ over Church and State. older Christians, and with the problems of numbers and mobility.

Relationships with the larger people of God

Faculty members, students and administrators need to realize that a people-of-God school stands or falls with the people of which it is a part. A Mennonite school's future is tied to the branches of the God-movement from which it springs.

This means that a Mennonite school has a real stake in strengthening the congregations to which it relates. In the present situation, it may mean going beyond the task of educating the youth which has been the central focus of our schools in the past and working more in adult education and with leadership development in the congregations.

Mennonite schools need to relate closely to people in their congregations as a resource for carrying on the educational process. The difficulties and barriers to doing this in a full way are enormous. A faculty member teaching history will ordinarily get many of his cues from other historians, and it will be difficult for him to think that a businessman or farmer could tell him much about teaching history. And the businessman and farmer would not see himself as responsible for telling a history professor how to go about his work. And yet we all know that the brothers and sisters in the congregations do have a role in providing college teachers and administrators with a perspective on what the educational process is ultimately about.

Maybe we can see a model for the relationships that we need from another profession. A layman cannot tell the surgeon where to cut, but he can tell whether it still hurts weeks after he was supposed to be cured.

A distinctive purpose in times of change

We are living in a time of upheaval and change in education; interest in going to college has declined both among Americans generally and among Mennonites in recent years.

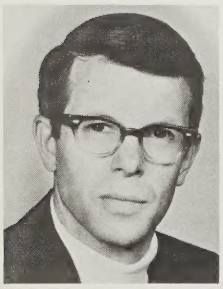
Mennonite schools can be sensitive to changing career interests, but they will not attract students by spending all their time on outdoing public institutions in discipline-oriented class offerings of the kinds characteristic of most American educational institutions.

There are some questions having to do with our preparation for life and work in the God-movement that cannot be handled adequately by congregations alone. Mennonite schools provide the setting for young people together with some older representatives of the people of God to deal with the distinctively Christian vision of the good society.

The continuing task we need to wrestle with is to provide the unique kind of education that grows with integrity and excitement out of our unique calling as a people.

Doing an egg dance together

By Daniel Hertzler



I don't know much about dancing, but I seem to have heard of an "egg dance." This no doubt would be an exercise in fancy foot work in which the dancer performs graceful movements through an obstacle course laid out with eggs.

The church and the church college are doing a kind of economic egg dance. The rules call for doing it together when at first glance it would appear simpler to negotiate the obstacles separately. Why dance together if it would be easier apart?

An experiment backed with conviction

It is the conviction of the Mennonite Board of Education that some unique Christian educational emphases are being attempted in Mennonite higher education and it would be a great loss to abandon the experiment. But we recognize that both church and colleges need to be convinced that the efforts to cooperate are worthwhile.

A report from the College Entrance Examination Board states that college costs have risen 35 per cent in the last four years and are due to go up again in the fall. It is of interest to see that Goshen's inclusive fee has increased a little less than 12 per cent in the same period. But the trend is up. Can we continue the egg dance or will one of us fall and destroy the rhythm?

The will to continue

I believe we can continue successfully if we both have the will. If church colleges could function 40 years ago during the Great Depression they can do so today if we agree they are important.

The support which Goshen asks of the churches is really quite modest on an average. Take my own Allegheny Conference as an example. During the current support year Goshen is asking a little less than $4.25 per member. For our family of six this means $25.50. Of course, this does not cover all our support for higher education since Allegheny Conference also gives to Goshen Biblical Seminary and Eastern Mennonite College and Seminary. Can the conference actually raise the $4.25? It should be feasible when we realize that last year we gave $3.80.

Who can say what is the source of the will to support and pray for our colleges? Perhaps it is made up of one part the belief that they are indeed our colleges, one part the desire to train our young people in the understanding of our heritage and one part the belief that the church has a special calling for which young people need Christian training. I continue to believe that these convictions exist among us, though not all have thought about them carefully and some have rejected them. Many other church colleges have decided to separate from the denominations which founded them. In doing so, they have placed themselves in the control of other sponsors, for no college can function alone.

As Paul wrote to the Corinthians, "A wide door for effective service has opened . . . and there are many adversaries" (I Cor. 16:9). If the Mennonite Church and Mennonite colleges are to buy up this educational opportunity, we will need to find ways for all our young people who can profit from college education to have it. This will mean more effort given to recruitment among minorities and lower income groups who need help in paying the costs. The colleges cannot be expected to raise all this scholarship money and so the churches will need to help lead the way in providing for it.

A personal view of church and college

By Bob and Lucy Gotwals

In looking back over the 25 years since we attended Goshen College, we recognize that one of the greatest blessings in our lives had its beginning there. This blessing is manifested in the number of friendships we formed which have grown through the years. These friendships were not to be found among our fellow students only, but among faculty members as well.

It was our hope that as our children attend Goshen College they too would find true friends who would bring happiness and meaning to their lives. Our hopes are being realized, for both Susan and Brent have found friends — students and faculty — who have enriched, enlightened, encouraged and added new dimensions to their lives.

A community of caring and sharing

The student body has doubled since we were students, yet the caring community still exists. Goshen College is to be commended for making every effort to have this as an ongoing concern.

It feels good to talk with professors who are interested in students to the extent that they share their homes for coffee, fellowship, and discussion. Students are not just numbers, but persons with whom the faculty want to share their lives. This interest far outweighs the facts learned in the classroom. In talking with other Goshen students, we find their experience much the same as our children's.

Church and college reach out for each other

From a second perspective, we would like to comment on another encouraging development at GC. We have noted over the years the increasing awareness by both the college and the church of their interdependence and need for each other. There is an active reaching out toward one another.

Our roots are set in the church with a heritage and tradition of a loving, believers community. This is a unique witness and it offers a fitting channel to show God's greatness and goodness to society on every hand.

The college can educate youth in the high ideal of the church by providing both theory and practical experience. It can bring an awareness of how our unique heritage serves as a Christian witness to society in general. With its resource of personnel, who have developed their gifts and insights through years of study and teaching, the college has great potentiality for enriching the church as a whole.

As alumni, parents of students and as interested persons, our hope is that the reaching out of the church and college toward one another continues to develop and that both will realize more fully God's potentiality for them. We also want to do all we can to encourage personal interest and friendship-building on the college campus. We thank God for our Goshen friends and for giving our children the same privilege and blessing.

Bob Gotwals, Souderton, PA, is chairman of the Board of Overseers. He and his wife, Lucy, are both GC alumni. Their daughter Susan was graduated from GC in April, and their son Brent, a GC sophomore, is currently in Belize on the Study-Service Trimester. Another son, Christopher, just completed third grade.

Commencement
1974

Alan Landis (center) and Zairois herdsmen rounded up the cattle twice monthly for a bath in the 18-foot deep dipping tank for protection against ticks and tsetse flies. It was not unusual for herdsmen to stay four to five feet behind the cattle. If a horned cow would turn on one, he could be a fatality after one gore.

He dreams of Africa

Alan Landis is older than most Goshen College juniors because after concentrating in business at Hesston College for two years, he took off for Africa in Mennonite Central Committee's Pax program.

You might say Landis had two strikes against him before he ever got to Africa. First, he couldn't hack French in language school in Belgium. Second, his promised job as agriculture teacher at University of Kissingani, in Northern Zaire, was filled by the time he arrived.

In Kinshasa with no job and very little French, the Methodists hired Landis for a different kind of educational project. He was to teach a Zairois the basics of maintenance — plumbing, carpentry, masonry, wiring, painting. The job was in Southern Zaire's copper mining area at Mulungwishi, where the Methodists had a big educational operation — five schools, dormitories, teachers' houses.

A new job in five months

After five months, he was sent 100 miles farther south to Lubumbashi (formerly Elizabethville) to buy drugs, construction materials and all kinds of supplies and ship them to the various missions. There he trained a Zairois to take his job in six months. It was a "first" for the Methodists, one of the largest protestant groups in Zaire, who are striving to make the Zairois church authentic, independent of the "mother" church in U.S.A.

Such was the pattern for young, Pennsylvania-born Landis in Africa. Hopping over Zaire, he served here, then there. His next stop was at Kananga, in Central Zaire, where for six months he was purchaser and shipper for five mission stations, including schools and hospitals.

Then to Katako Kombe, at 1 degree south of the equator, surrounded by lush grasslands plains and beautifully forested valleys. Because Katako Kombe as a mission station had been abandoned for 12 years, Landis was greeted with a big feast, with songs and dancing. The Zairois thought he heralded a new era of missions, gave him a new name, Ilungamelo, meaning hope, and invited him to their homes for meals.

Raising beef cattle under watchful eyes

Actually, what Alan started with these Zairois was more than a mission station. A farm boy from Harleysville, he launched a beef cattle operation for a Methodist bishop. With 20 cows and one bull, all of the sharply-pointed-horn NDama breed, Alan went to work, only to find that the Zairois are afraid of cattle.

Watching young Landis raise cattle virtually singlehandedly, government officials and Methodist leaders soon saw vast opportunities in agriculture. Most important, these rural Zairois, who grew and ate rice as a staple food, had no source of meat.

But Landis's 27-month term was over. As he was making his good-by tour through Zaire, he stopped in Kinshasa. There he found out that the government had appropriated $160,000 and 60,000 acres to begin a cattle ranch in northern Zaire. Would you operate it? a personal adviser of the minister of agriculture asked Alan.

Alan said yes. First he bought 160 head from a Belgian cotton company that had been nationalized. Then he bought 40 head from a Catholic ranch. But his biggest job lay ahead. At Kinshasa, 1200 miles away, were 120 more. With a Belgian adviser, he went to Southern Zaire to pick out the 110 cows and 10 purebred bulls he wanted.

Monumental problems in shipping cattle

In North America, with its iron rails crisscrossing the country, shipping cattle is simplified. In Zaire, however, Alan faced big problems. For one thing, it's hotter. For another, hay and feed depots are practically non-existent. There is also a maze of local government officialdom to contend with. And finally, the people are suspicious of the white man.

For the 1200 mile journey, Alan calculated it would take three weeks. First, the cattle would be shipped by train to a barge. Connections were tight, and he had only one day to transfer his prize from trainside to barge. The minister of agriculture kindly sent him manpower; uninformed about the nature of their task, they arrived in suits and ties.

It was an all-day and all-night job. And it was hot. The cattle drank 5000 gallons of water, and the watering was all done by hand. Loaded, Alan and his cattle were pushed to the middle of the river to await the tug. It was a long wait.

A tug, an accident, a snail's pace

Finally, after two days, the tug arrived. The first day went fine. The second day there was an accident. One man was killed; two others were injured. The crew felt Alan had brought bad luck. There were rumors of mutiny.

Arriving at the first port, three days late, Alan was frantic. He would be out of feed if the journey continued at the slow pace. He radioed Kinshasa. To his good fortune, Kinshasa sent a diesel tug to push him directly to his destination. But more problems. Now he got ahead of schedule. Arriving five days early, the trucks were not there for the final 100-miles leg of the journey. While waiting, Alan built a corral, only to have two cows drop off the barge and run into the forest and another break loose from the stockade.

Although another cow was lost on the trip by truck to the range, Alan ended up with a total of 314 head on the 60,000-acre ranch. He immediately divided them into three herds, set up corrals, built a dipping tank to treat them for ticks and tsetse flies.

Zaire's largest government cattle ranch

In three months Alan was managing the biggest government cattle ranch in Zaire. Thirty-three Zairois were responsible to him. Alan helped map long-range plans to build the herd to 1000 head, then to 5000 head, then get into extension work to help the people.

Government officials were pleased with Alan's performance. They begged him to set up another ranch. But Alan declined. He didn't feel he was the most qualified. He wanted more confidence. He has returned to the States for more education — and this year his courses are genetics, microbiology, African culture, sociology, and one of his earlier stumbling blocks, French.

Despite study loads Alan and Wendy, his fiancee, are "Big Brother" and "Big Sister" in a Goshen home.

The sick calf charged Alan, but he soon got it under control to administer antibiotics.

Alan and his fiancee, Wendy Golden, also studying at GC, dream of returning to Africa. Wendy, daughter of Methodist missionaries who have served in Liberia and Angola, and are now in Zaire, has lived in Africa all her life.

Development, more than growth, is achieving personal goals

To Alan and Wendy, the development of Africa is not in narrow terms — in material things. They see material development as growth. Rather, development broadly is person-oriented — and that's most important. A mind, a self, believing in what is being done — that is real development.

Looking at it another way, Alan and Wendy see the Zairois church taking over a larger part of Zairois lives. The old mission institutions are dying out. Now the Zairois are becoming more involved. No longer is the missionary pushing; the Zairois are pushing themselves.

This is good, Alan and Wendy believe. And they are ready to make themselves available to provide agricultural know-how and train the Zairois in a way that will help them meet their goals.

Executive board acts on slate

Attending the January 19 meeting of the Executive Board of the Alumni Association were (clockwise, from right foreground): John K. Hershberger '72, executive secretary, Goshen, IN; Leanne Fricke Schertz '58, president-elect, Peoria, IL; LaJane Richer Yoder '62, recording secretary, Goshen, IN; Mary Lu Imhoff Smucker '56, Columbus, OH; Paul Diller '52, Adrian, MI; Loren Weldy '54, South Bend, IN; David G. Lehman '50, past president, Elkhart, IN; Dale Swartzendruber '50, West Lafayette, IN; and Donald Minter '50, Goshen, IN.

The board acted on the slate of nominees for the 1974 alumni election and alumni weekend schedule. Both the ballot and alumni weekend program are published elsewhere in the Bulletin.

The board heard reports on student recruitment, alumni gifts, the LIFE (Learning Inquiry into Faith and Experience) program to be launched next fall, and a proposed plan for greater interchange of students and faculty with congregations. It commended the class agents working in the 1974 Alumni Fund for their response and participation.

The next meeting of the executive board will be with the board of directors on Alumni Day, June 15.

Wheelchair persons need barriers removed

By Cathy Barnett

Architectural barriers are usually things most people take for granted. Little items like curbs, flights of steps, telephones and drinking fountains placed at standard heights, restroom facilities with narrow doors, are some of the main reasons why handicapped individuals are forced to remain at home.

These barriers not only discriminate against people in wheelchairs. They are equally as frustrating to a woman pushing a baby carriage as to a person who must rely on a cane, crutch or brace. These people are often stripped of their individual pride for the simple reason they must ask for help in buildings that are supposed to be accessible to everyone.

Edith Herr, a multiple sclerosis patient confined to a wheelchair, has found most public buildings make traveling difficult for the handicapped.

After seven years, a test

Things were really going well for Edith. After earning her master's degree in physical education, she landed a good teaching position at Goshen College and quickly became involved in student activities. After so many years of study, all the pieces were finally falling into place.

It was not until her seventh year at Goshen that Edith received the first sign that her total outlook on life was going to be tested. She had tried to run — to catch a bus that was slowly pulling away from the curb. She knew she had to run — but couldn't. Her legs simply did not respond.

It didn't take long for doctors to turn in a diagnosis of multiple sclerosis — a crippling disease that, in Edith's case, would eventually take away the use of her legs. And because MS affects each individual differently, there was no way of knowing how long it would take for the symptoms to advance, or how extensive the damage to the nervous system would be.

Through her strong faith and independence, however, Edith dug in and refused to let MS get her down. Though her case was diagnosed in 1952, it was not until 1961 that the problem became noticeable to others. And as she gradually lost the use of her legs, first relying on a supportive cane until she finally had to depend on a wheelchair, Edith kept working. By making the necessary adjustments in her teaching schedule plus learning to drive her car with hand controls, she was able to continue her career at Goshen until 1964.

Even when Edith returned to live with her parents in Millersville, PA, she continued to live her life to the full. She returned to school, this time to earn a certificate as a registered remedial reading tutor, set up a small office at home, joined the MS Patients Club and became an active member of the Monterey Mennonite Church in Leola.

She continued working in physical recreation by helping with church camping programs during the summer months. Some of these camps are located several hundred miles away. And, of course, she still enjoys sports like swimming, bowling and archery — and likes to travel when she gets the chance.

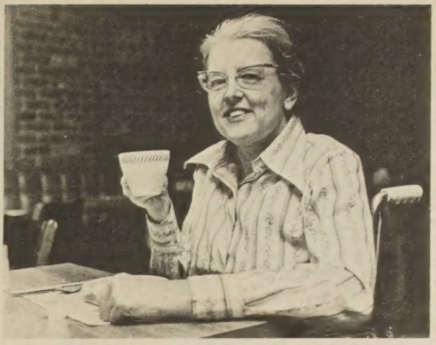
This brief history of Edith Herr's battle with MS is but one example of thousands who have made the adjustment to a debilitative handicap.

Architectural barriers can produce hermits

Too often, people like Edith who are bound to wheelchairs never travel outside their own homes. What's more, their hermit-like existence is often not of their own choosing. Rather, it's due to the fact they cannot overcome the overwhelming number of architectural barriers — things most people take for granted — like a revolving door, a simple curb, a series of steps.

There are common structural barriers found in the design of both private homes and public buildings, most of which could have been avoided by simple forethought on the part of the architect.

On a shopping trip to any store, for example, a person in a wheelchair could find the following barriers: a sidewalk curb, heavy entrance doors, inaccessible phone booths or wall phones too high to reach, water fountains too high to drink from, escalators, a restaurant with counter seating only, restroom stalls too narrow for wheelchairs.



Edith Herr taught at GC 1946-64. On her retirement from the college, she was honored by the Board of Overseers and named assistant professor emerita of physical education. Last fall, the Lancaster (PA) Sunday News featured Miss Herr in a story, "There's No Excuse for Architectural Barriers." It has been condensed for the Bulletin.

A feeling of independence

In talking about her own experiences with architectural barriers, Edith Herr quickly pointed out it's not that people won't help a person in a wheelchair up a curb or through a door. "The ability to get around on your own makes you feel independent. It's nice to know you are recognized as an individual; that you don't have to ask for help.

"I know a fine person," Edith continued, "who won't go to church for the simple reason she has to be carried up and down the steps. And I really feel sorry for her, because she can't bring herself to do this."

Different types of public buildings often have their own special architectural barriers. Banks, for example, often have steps, heavy doors, and counters too high to reach for writing and cashing checks. In restaurants, if tables are available they are often too crowded or too low to accommodate wheelchairs. And if a person in a wheelchair sits in the aisle at the end of a booth, he himself becomes a barrier to other customers.

Libraries and museums are notorious for their multi-flights of steps. And worst of all, most public schools and college buildings discriminate against the handicapped, which isolates handicapped students from their own peer groups.

"Even a youngster on crutches has trouble getting up and down the flights of steps found in most schools," Edith related. "And I see no reason, especially with the new state agreement saying a school must educate all children no matter how handicapped, why the districts do not make better accommodations for these children. There are plenty of exceptional children who are very normal."

A curb can be impossible

As far as her own travels go, Edith has found there are some buildings with minimal barriers where she can go with little outside assistance.

A sidewalk curb outside a building may not sound like much, but as Edith pointed out, "It is much easier to get out of a car if the feet can be firmly planted on ground level. It's a principle of physics. If a handicapped person has to put his feet on a curb, he has to pull his body up out of the car. And for some in a wheelchair, this is an impossible feat."

Edith also mentioned the problems encountered in parking garages. Edith has a lightweight wheelchair (she calls it her "VW") that folds up and can be snugly tucked into the back seat of a car. Getting in and out of the car is a snap. The problem comes in getting out of the garage! In nearly all parking garages, elevators are faced with a curb or a series of steps. Of course the difficulty can be avoided by double parking in front of the building. But this can pose a hazard too.

Needed: many more alumni to take part in the '74 Fund

After nine months of gifts, the 1974 Alumni Fund is short of last year's record for the comparable period. Response to the 1974 Fund shows 292 fewer donors and a decrease of $15,818 for the period beginning July 1 and ending March 31.

There are at least two convincing reasons why alumni support should be sought and strengthened this year.

First, the college faces a tenuous financial position as fiscal '74 draws to a close on June 30. Inflation's effects on materials, labor and college-wide operations have produced the unattractive projection that the year could end in the red. If an operating deficit occurs this year, it will be the first in 34 years.

Second, alumni participation is often used as a criterion by corporations and foundations as to how much the alumni think of the institution which provided them with education. If relatively few alumni give to a college, a corporation or a foundation can become easily discouraged in its support of higher education.

Two major efforts to communicate with the 10,977 alumni non-donors are yet to be completed. One effort is the Alumni Phonothon, with the final three telephone campaigns in progress as the Bulletin goes to press.

In June, the last month of the fiscal year, Tilman Smith will send a final letter to non-donors requesting their support. Smith is the chairman of the 1974 Alumni Fund.

Fiscal year	Donors	Gifts
First three quarters, 1973	2660	$168,811
First three quarters, 1974	2368	$152,993

Although much work is yet to be done before June 30, alumni response to date has been supportive. The average gift is higher than last year. Many have sustained or increased their 1973 gift. Others have renewed their support. Some are taking part in the Fund for the first time. There are also those who have pledged to give before June 30.

Response and good feelings from the phonothons and the mailings to date have been encouraging. The crucial test is ahead. Will goodwill among the non-donors be converted into cash?

Gifts of any size for the Goshen College Alumni Fund before June 30, 1974, will provide the lifeblood the institution must have to balance the books.

Tulips and drapes are Auxiliary projects

Last November the Goshen College Auxiliary took on a beautification project on campus. Women from Yellow Creek Church, assisted by men from Greencroft Villa and college physical plant staff, planted more than 200 tulip bulbs.

Some 200 tulips are blooming on campus this spring, thanks to the Goshen College Auxiliary who spent a morning last November planting bulbs in two large flower beds.

A second project of the auxiliary was new drapes for the lobby of High Park Residence. A major project, the sewing required three days in February.

The auxiliary invites church and community groups within a 20-mile radius of the college to volunteer time to work on special improvements on campus.

Helping in the tulip planting project were Mrs. Leatha Carpenter, Mrs. Warren Christophel, Mrs. Roy Davidhizar, Mrs. Clair Hoover, Miss Florence Hoover, Mrs. Elton Martin and Mrs. Herbert Maust, all of Yellow Creek Mennonite Church, near Goshen, and Fred Yohn, of Greencroft Villa, Goshen. Also on hand were Don Holsopple of the college physical plant staff, Mrs. J. Lawrence Burkholder of the College Mennonite Church, and Mrs. Arthur Smucker, director of activities for the auxiliary.

Working on the drapes for the men's residence hall were Mrs. Aden Horst, Mrs. Wayne Miller, Mrs. Fred Stichter and Mrs. James Weaver, all of Locust Grove Mennonite Church, of Elkhart; Mrs. C. Franklin Bishop, of East Goshen Mennonite Church, of Goshen; and Mrs. H. Clair Amstutz, Mrs. Ervin Beck, Mrs. Atlee Beechy, Mrs. S. D. Brunk, Mrs. Ray Burkholder, Mrs. Mary Imhoff, Mrs. Daniel E. Kauffman, Mrs. J. Howard Kauffman, Mrs. Earl Lehman, Mrs. David F. Leichty Sr., Mrs. Menno Miller, Mrs. William F. Miller, Mrs. Arthur Smucker and Mrs. Roy Umble, all of College Mennonite Church.

Future projects include development of a bird sanctuary north of Science Hall and putting up martin birdhouses.

Nominating committee prepares slate

The committee has strived to offer a slate that represents a range of classes as well as geographic distribution of alumni, to complement the incumbents. The slate appears on Pages 9-12 of this issue.

Regional clubs active across the nation

Regional clubs of the Alumni Association meeting this winter and early spring have been hearing reports direct from campus.

Mary Oyer, professor of music, spoke about her sabbatical experience in Africa at the Chicago regional club December 1. Forty-eight were present and they met at Wellington Inn for roast beef. Officers for 1973 were Ed Herner '53, president; Sem '70 and Mabel Amstutz '70 Sutter, vice-president and secretary. Officers for 1974 are Sem Sutter '70, president; Mark '70 and Ruth Hunsberger, vice-president and secretary.

John S. Oyer, professor of history, and Norman L. Kauffmann, associate dean of students, spoke on "The Humane Studies Program — What Can It Do" at the Central Illinois regional club January 12. The meeting was the first in Illinois since 1968, and 104 were present. The place was Sinorak's, of Bloomington, and a smorgasbord was served. Local arrangements were in charge of Eldon Dean '61 and LaVerne Vogt '54 Nafziger, Jon '66 and Alice Hartzler '65 Kennell; Daryl Nafziger '67 was emcee. The committee to plan the next meeting is comprised of Rich Crockett '70, coordinator; Joyce Hofer, May Imhoff '39, and Maurice Yordy '52.

J. Lawrence Burkholder, president of GC, spoke to 40 Holmes County, Ohio, alumni gathered for a family-style dinner at Der Dutchman Restaurant, Walnut Creek, January 26. The evening was arranged by Irene Hershberger '47, president; Paul Roth '53, vice-president; and Pat Overholt Yoder '67, secretary. A trio — Julia Yoder Gerber '63, Mrs. Mary Miller, and Carol Hostetler Roth '53 — sang for the group. Officers for the 1975 meeting are Paul Roth '53, president; Art Mullet '67, vice-president; and Ellen Miller Miller '49, secretary.

Samuel L. Yoder, professor of education, spoke to the Arizona regional club at Alpine Village Inn, Phoenix, on February 2. Fifty-eight persons were present, including a number of "snowbirds," persons who substitute sunny and snow-free Arizona winters for the nasty winters of their regular place of residence. Yoder spoke on the innovative curricula at GC and how they meet the needs of students. Guy F. Hershberger, professor emeritus of history and emcee of the evening, "dazzled the group with his incredible memory of knowledge regarding the history and ancestry of GC alumni, young and old," reports Stanley Haarer '63. Haarer and his wife, the former Evelyn Rhodes '63, were in charge of the arrangements for the evening. Seven alumni from three voluntary service units in the area were present. They were Kathy Birkey '72, Tim '74 and Joan Gingerich '74 Morningstar, Randall Murray '72, Ruth Otto '73, Donna Snyder '69, and Ramona Yoder '70.

Mary Oyer, professor of music, spoke about her African sabbatical and led the 60 persons present in a singing session at the Southwest Ohio regional club, Northridge Christian Fellowship Center, Springfield, March 2. Also on the program were Conrad Mast, son of Leon and Glenda Frey '56 Mast, and Susan Claasen, daughter of Jonas and Mary Byler '45 Claasen, who performed instrumental music, and Mr. and Mrs. Wally Fahrer, who sang for the group. The meeting was arranged by Glenda Mast '56, who was emcee for the evening, and by Mary Claasen '45.

John A. Lapp, dean and professor of history, spoke on "Directions for Goshen College" to the 40 persons present at the Iowa regional club, Captain's Table Restaurant, Washington, March 22. Two numbers of special music were on the program, as were Lynn '68 and Lois Falb '71 Newcomer, who spoke about the work of alumni admissions recruiters. Officers for the meeting were David '64 and Phyllis Bontrager '63 Rhodes, and Marie Herner '29. Officers for the 1975 meeting are Ora '31 and Alta Brenneman '30 Keiser, and Phyllis Yoder Litwiller '60.

As the Bulletin goes to press, arrangements have been made for two regional clubs — one late in April and one in mid-May. Details are:

Greater Eastern Pennsylvania regional club, April 27, at New Life Boys' Ranch, Harleysville. Cheese appetizer by Mary Ellen Hunsberger '56, followed by buffet. Speaking, Jack E. Dueck, associate professor of English, on "Confessions of Menno Knight," his personal pilgrimage through various creative methods of communication. In charge of arrangements, R. Wayne Clemens '59, Calvin Britsch '69, Jane Alderfer '61.

Northwest Ohio regional club, May 16, 6:30 p.m., at Community Room of Farmers and Merchants State Bank, Archbold. Speaking, J. Lawrence Burkholder, GC president. In charge of arrangements, Donald Jantzi.

Chorale to Canada and Michigan

The Goshen College Chorale, directed by Dwight Weldy, sang in upper Michigan and Ontario churches on a ten-day tour in late April.

Six songs opened the program. Some of the numbers were accompanied by an ensemble of four violins, viola and cello.

The middle section of the program was excerpts of Bach's "Passion According to St. John." The cantata, "Worthy Is the Lamb," composed in 1959 by J. Harold Moyer, was the final section of the program. The cantata's text is from Revelation 4 and 5, arranged by John H. Yoder '47. Congregation singing is part of the work.

Faculty concert guide ready

A 16-page guide, Goshen College Presents Music Faculty in Concert, has just been released.

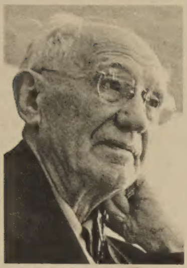
Available to alumni, pastors, community concert organizations and schools, the guide offers information about six GC faculty, for an ensemble, for recitals, speaking engagements or a combination lecture-performance.

Typical topics and recital programs are listed in the booklet. For a free copy and more information, write to Alumni Office, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526.

Schedule for Alumni Weekend 1974



S. C. Yoder, president emeritus of GC, will be honored Friday evening, June 14, of Alumni Weekend.

Friday, June 14, 1974

S. C. Yoder Recognition Dinner
6:30 - 9:00 p.m. Friday, June 14, 1974
Alumni Memorial Dining Room

The event will recognize Dr. Sanford C. Yoder, president emeritus of Goshen College, for his outstanding contributions to Goshen College beginning 50 years ago. Because there is no golden anniversary graduating class this year (the college was closed 1923-24 for reorganization), the festivity assumes the position in Alumni Weekend previously held by the Old Timers Banquet.

Saturday, June 15, 1974

9:30 a.m. Alumni Association of Goshen College, Board of Directors Meeting, Arts 109.

12:00 noon Class Reunions

Special note: This invitation is open from all classes. You are welcome and invited to the reunion of the class you identify most closely with.

For example, suppose you started with one class, then interrupted college and returned much later to be graduated. You are still most welcome at the reunion of the class you started with, even though you were graduated with another class and may not have received an invitation to the reunion from the class you started college with.

If you will notify the Alumni Office of the class you wish to be identified with, the records will be adjusted so you will receive future mailings.

1922 Arrangements by Howard Yoder. Members of the classes are being personally contacted regarding details.

1929 Location to be confirmed. Howard Musselman in charge of arrangements.

1939 Location to be confirmed. J. Lawrence Burkholder in charge of arrangements.

1944 Location to be confirmed. Weyburn Groff in charge of arrangements.

1949 Location to be confirmed. Clarence and Wilma Ewert Leichty and Emma Sommers Richards in charge of arrangements.

1954 Ox Bow Haus in Ox Bow Park, five miles northwest of Goshen on U.S. 33, then east across railroad tracks and follow County Road 45 to the park. Mary Ellen Yoder Meyer and Rita Clemens Smoker in charge of arrangements.

1959 Schrock Pavilion in Shanklin Park, one-fourth mile west of State Road 15 on State Road 119 (Plymouth Avenue) — approximately one mile north of Goshen College campus. Phyllis Lauver Beck in charge of arrangements.

1964 Bethany Christian High School, 2904 South Main Street, Goshen, IN. Diane Frey Bodiker and Betty Mast Sherck in charge of arrangements.

1969 Goshen College Cabin. Ron Gunden and Keith Springer in charge of arrangements.

3:45-5:45 p.m. Campus Tours

The Alumni Relations Committee has suggested structured campus tours this year for alumni interested in reacquainting themselves with the Goshen campus as it is today.

The tour groups will meet with the guides in the snackshop-bookstore area of the Union building at 3:45 and begin visiting about seven of the more recent campus additions including: Marine Biology, the Turner Precision X-Ray Laboratory, the Mennonite Historical Library, the Art Gallery which will have a comprehensive exhibition depicting the professional efforts of the late Arthur Sprunger '22, and the Roupp Memorial Organ. Questions and discussion will be an important part of the tour.

4-9 p.m. Children's Activities

Free, organized, supervised activities for alumni children, kindergarten through Grade 7 will be provided from 4 to 9 p.m. Games, sports activities, group play, wiener roast, and children's films will be featured. Please meet in the Union gymnasium at the appropriate time. In case of inclement weather, be prepared for gymnasium activities.

6:15-9:00 p.m. Annual Alumni Banquet

Last year's much appreciated roast beef buffet menu will be repeated. Brief annual business meeting will follow.

President J. Lawrence Burkholder will provide a topic for interaction with alumni as he presents, "The Future of Goshen College: How Do We React?"

Formal evening events will close at approximately 9:00 p.m. However, you may continue your fellowship after that hour.

Reservations for the Alumni Banquet must be received by June 7, 1974. Cost per person is $4.00.

There will be numerous openings in both elementary and secondary schools of the Tuba City Public School District. Ninety-five per cent of the students are Indians and the schools are equipped above average. Housing is furnished at minimal expense. Nurses are in demand by the Indian Health Service.

I'm happy for Goshen College, and many fine memories of human edification through unpretentious, natural, spontaneous interaction and caring! . . . My check, which is merely a token, does register my recognition of excellence and exoneration of the college as one of the avenues of Christ in the speaking of decency, and understanding and encouragement for the improvement of levels of condition of life in the world.

We pray God's blessing to continue to accompany and energize the human healing and beautification processes that operate at the College Community — to the ends of earth — to the ends of time!

I have heard some alarming rumors about things that are going on at the College now, so it would be easy for me to take this as an excuse not to contribute this year. Of course, there have always been those who almost seem to enjoy finding fault with the College, so rumors are not a valid reason for withholding support to an institution which has played an important role in my own life.

More important, however, because of the critical times we are living in, and the severe testing of the Church as a whole, I feel that we dare not throw up our hands in despair, and give up. Rather, let us take Jesus at His word when He said that He is building His church, and because of this, the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. I am therefore taking this small step of faith, and sending my contribution.

Even though I attended Goshen College Nursing School I never felt a real part of the college. I lived off campus mostly, didn't meet many non-nursing students, and had already graduated from a college of my own denomination.

But your patient encouragement by means of (the Bulletin) as I got today should have its rewards. And, too, I know that Christian education doesn't wait for people to get all bills paid off before they think they can contribute.

This is in response to the request we received last week to contribute to Goshen College. Unfortunately, we cannot afford to contribute any money at this time or for some time to come. There are two reasons. First, my wife has a huge college debt to repay, she has yet to get a full-time job, and we are just trying to get established financially. Therefore we have no funds available to contribute.

Second, we had considered giving part of our tithe money but under the circumstances, we don't feel justified in doing so. What are those circumstances? The deterioration of spiritual values, life, and atmosphere at Goshen College.

Don't try to tell us that this isn't true because "we were there" and we know better! In fact I was very disappointed in the general spiritual life and atmosphere on campus while I attended Goshen College for four years.

True, some spiritual life and growth can be found and experienced if one searches hard enough to find it. We both benefited in our K-group experience. However, in general, the spiritual life and atmosphere on campus leaves much to be desired.

True, one can receive a great education, learn a lot, mature, and enjoy it all as we did. We would contribute on just that basis alone if we could but we lack the funds. As stated above, we do not feel justified in giving of our tithe money. Therefore, we regretfully state that we are unable to contribute to Goshen College.

It is difficult to send money from here, but expect a gift from us soon from our account in Elkhart. Even if there is one dime left in our account, we'll be sure to send half of the dime. Sincerely, we have to say we really appreciated our years at GC and even if we become jobless, we'll never regret our experience there and the money invested.

Instead of giving gifts to each other at Christmas, we want to give to Him who came to bring new meaning into our lives. Enclosed is a small gift to be used wherever it is needed. May the Lord's blessings continue with all who share in the awesome task of preparing lives for service.

In these days of world-wide spiritual famine, I would like to fancy that my gift in some small way helps give Goshen College a voice in contemporary affairs. So many voices are heard — harsh, raucous and lacking in wisdom — the soft notes of reconciliation and peace would fall like manna in the wilderness. If the human experiment is not to end in chaos and gross darkness, the world must listen to such voices.

RE: Alumnae names

If you are receiving Goshen College publications by a name other than the one you desire, take heart. The Alumni Office will be pleased to change your mailing plate.

For example, if you are like Mrs. A, you are troubled when you receive mail under the name of your husband with Mrs. preceding it. If it grates you that the use of your husband's name with Mrs. before it is just one more reminder how male dominated American society is, then to preserve your identity, the Alumni Office will be glad to change your mailing plate to read the way you want it. For example, you might choose: Christian name — Maiden family name — Married family name.

Another example, if you are like B (she could be Miss or Mrs.), you would much prefer to be Ms. Again, the Alumni Office will be glad to change your mailing plate to the way you want it.

The Alumni Office has recently honored several requests to change mailing plates. There may be others who desire similar service.

The coupon below will give the Alumni Office the information it needs to make the change you desire.

Executive board candidates, 1974

Vote for five — one in each pair.

1st pair

Ruth Ebersole Glick '37, Wooster, OH, is the mother of three GC graduates as well as of a current student. One daughter, in high school, is at home.

Ruth has taught school in the elementary grades. An art and painting enthusiast, she later taught art on a part-time basis. She has taken several courses in art and painting and is active in the local art guild and camera club.

At her church she is library committee chairperson and makes banners for special use.

In addition to art, painting and photography, she enjoys bird-watching and family travel.

Vernon D. Miller '37, Berlin, OH, is the father of two GC graduates and a past president of the regional club of the Alumni Association.

By profession he has been a music instructor in the public school for 37 years. For the past five years he has taught instrumental music at Garaway Junior High, Sugarcreek. Before that he taught both instrumental and vocal music at East Holmes.

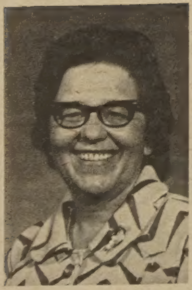
After leaving Goshen, he studied at Ohio State U. and Kent State U. He has taught at church music camps for several summers.

In church and community activities, he has been Sunday-school superintendent for several terms and a teacher nearly every year. He currently directs the community men's chorus, now in its 10th year.

Hobbies include photography, gardening and minor repairs.

About GC, Vernon says, "I appreciate the effort that is being made to get GC back into the good graces of the constituent Mennonite churches, so that the percentage of Mennonite students can be kept at a reasonably high level."

2nd pair

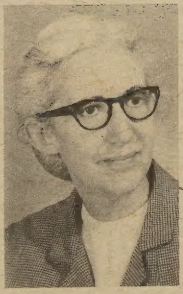


Emma Sommers Richards '49, Lombard, IL, is a public school teacher and co-pastor of Lombard Mennonite Church. She was a speaker at the 1974 Festival of the Word on GC's campus.

For 12 years she and her husband were missionary evangelists under the Mennonite Board of Missions in Japan.

After leaving Goshen, she studied theology and education on the graduate level and received the M.A. degree.

Emma is the mother of two current GC students. A daughter, in high school, is at home.



Christine P. Weaver '44, Columbia, MO, is educational director of the medical dietetic program, University of Missouri — Columbia, and a former dietitian of Goshen College.

She is also a former missionary, having served four years in Hochwan, China, under the Mennonite Board of Missions, 1947-51. Continuing her missionary interests, she is a member of the Chinese Bible class at the University today.

She received the M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in nutrition from State U. of Iowa.

Her hobbies are international cooking and reading.

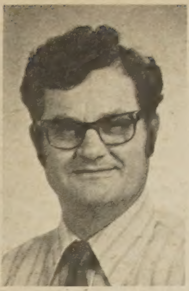
3rd pair

Edward Brookmyer '38, Goshen, IN, has been a public accountant for 28 years, and he is a former accounting instructor at GC.

Since graduation from GC, he has attended many public accountancy and professional management seminars. He was in Civilian Public Service four years and with an insurance agency two years.

In church and community he is a church school teacher and former choir member and deacon. He has been active in Exchange Clubs on the local and district level, a local estate planning council, United Fund, Michiana Mennonite Relief Sale, House of Simon No. 2, Inc., and Path Foundation.

His hobbies are antiques, wood refinishing and fishing. Of his three daughters and a son, two are GC alumni.

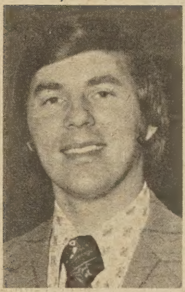


Donald J. Liechty '42, Archbold, OH, is a farmer. Earlier, for 20 years he was a farm equipment dealer.

In church and community he teaches Sunday school, and is a former church council member and Sunday-school superintendent. He is a member of the board of Sunshine Children's Home and president of the school board of Pettisville. He is a former member of the board of Fairlawn Haven, a nursing home.

Donald's hobbies are traveling and photography. Two daughters and a son are GC alumni; one son is in high school at home.

4th pair



Ivan W. Beyeler '68, Grabill, IN, is a pharmaceutical salesman. Earlier, he was in voluntary service at Adriel School teaching industrial arts to the retarded.

At church he is a tenor in the choir, chairman of the music committee and member of the advisory council.

Active in GC alumni affairs, he has been a member of the phonothon team in Fort Wayne for three years, and organized the effort last year.

His hobbies are golf, swimming, scuba, photography, and woodworking. He has two daughters, both pre-school age.

Calvin L. Britsch '69, Akron, PA, is assistant treasurer of Mennonite Central Committee and accountant for Heritage Productions, Inc.

At church he is a Sunday-school teacher and former Torchbearers sponsor. In community activities he is coach of the midget-midget baseball team.

Active in GC alumni affairs, he was a class agent in the '73 Alumni Fund. He is chairman-elect of the regional club of the Alumni Association. He is married and his hobbies are golf and water sports.

5th pair

Susan K. Shank '67, Goshen, IN, teaches violin and viola in GC's music preparatory department and is director of Bethany Christian High School's orchestra.

Last year she taught strings in the inner city schools of Rochester, NY. Before that, she taught violin in Bolivia and El Salvador in the Peace Corps. In that assignment she also helped organize chamber music concerts in remote areas of the countries. While in Bolivia she played violin in the National Symphony Orchestra.

In church she has taught Bible school and occasionally takes part in music groups for services. In community she is a member of the Elkhart Symphony and has been in the orchestral ensemble for the Goshen Community Chorus.

Susan received the M.Mus. in violin in 1970 from U. of Michigan. During graduate study she was a Teaching Fellow.

Susan's hobbies are traveling and camping. Currently she is in a piano trio with two other GC grads.

Loretta Schrock Yoder '60, Indianapolis, IN, is associate director of Repertory Theatre at Christian Theological Seminary.

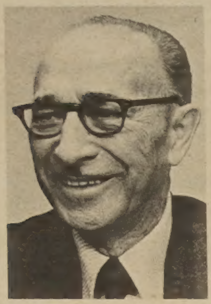
She was director and designer of the Amish-Mennonite Pageant, "This Land Is Ours," for its premiere performance in Ontario and again for its performance in northern Indiana last year.

In church she is choir director, children's activities leader, and pastor's wife. In denomination-wide activities she is the first woman to be a member of the board of Mennonite Broadcasts, Inc. She is also a member of Commission of Christian Education and Literature for Mennonite Board of Congregational Ministries.

Loretta has received the M.A. in theater from Indiana University.

She is the mother of two daughters, ages 10 and 13.

Track star of '16 recalls oil career



Morris J. Neterer '17 set GC's standard for the 100 yd. dash in 1916. And his remarkable feat of 10.2 seconds stood unsurpassed for a half-century. Although Norman Pfile '63 tied Neterer's record in 1963, it was not until 1966 that Merlin Hartman '68 bettered the time .2 second to set a new school record of 10.0 seconds.

Beside track, Neterer set some other records during his life. In 1961 he retired from the Sinclair Refining Co. (now Atlantic Richfield Co.) after 40 years of continuous service.

Known as "Mike" in Indiana and as "Mose" outside Indiana, Neterer taught grade school and operated the home farm of 165 acres for several years. He recalls having 69 pupils enrolled in a one-room country school. This school and farming routine was apparently not to Neterer's liking, for he then made his first contact with the industrial world in a stint of several years in steel mills at Indiana Harbor, IN.

Enters petroleum industry

In 1921, Neterer decided the petroleum industry offered greener pastures in a comparatively new field. So, in July he started to work for Sinclair Refining Co. at East Chicago in the labor gang at $.50 an hour.

During the early 20's Sinclair was in a rapidly expanding era and was training men for key personnel at other new plants. In 1924 Neterer was sent to Kansas City to assist in the construction and start-up of new processing units. Later he was assigned there permanently in charge of the operations. He continued in various capacities until 1943 at which time he was promoted to the refinery's assistant manager, a position he held until 1948. During Neterer's 27 years of refinery operating experience, he also participated in construction, start-up procedures and operating problems in a number of the other Sinclair plants in various locations in the U.S.

In 1949 Neterer was given a new job assignment as safety director of all Sinclair refineries. This is the position he retained until his retirement in 1961.

The establishment of this new department incorporated the organization and administration of a common safety program for all Sinclair plants. The new safety program was developed basically on the premise that management is responsible for the control of all personnel activities, and in consequence, correct job methods and their accomplishment will result in safe operations. This premise in turn required supervisory training programs to communicate these objectives. Later when the safety program became fairly well established, fire protection and prevention for all plants was added to the department's functions.

Set up annual symposia

To coordinate and carry out these programs, annual week-long symposia were held for all safety and fire protection department heads along with each plant's assistant managers. Each symposium was at a different location in the larger cities like Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, Houston, Corpus Christi. One was at a mountain resort in Wyoming. This program proved very successful in reducing accidents and disabling injuries, as well as developing a closer relationship between management and employees.

In addition to his Sinclair duties, Neterer has been active in other related organizations. In the field of safety and fire protection he was a member of the Greater Chicago Safety Council, National Petroleum Association, National Safety Council, National Fire Protection Association and the American Petroleum Institute. He has chaired the writing of a number of API accident and fire protection manuals. Also, he has served on both the API Central Committees of Accident Prevention and Fire Protection evaluating and editing the work of other task forces.

Traveler, bowler, golfer

Mr. Neterer and his wife, Harriett, like to travel and over the years, have been in every state of the Union except Oregon, Washington, Alaska and Hawaii. They have also covered many parts of Canada and Mexico. Mose retired his track shoes soon after leaving GC, but when traveling by car, he always carried his golf clubs and bowling ball and was ever ready for a challenge. He still bowls regularly in his hometown major league.

Upon retirement, the Neterers moved to a quiet corner in Wakarusa, IN, not too far from the old family farm where Mose was born and raised. He is active in the Lions Club, fundraising for a new library, church and civic activities — not to forget the daily coffee break with the boys at the local townhouse.

They are custodians at the Waterford church, and enjoy traveling, meetings, visiting, and church activities . . . Ed '30

Alumni recruiters support admissions efforts

By John Zook

While their financial contributions are important in the operation of Goshen College, many alumni support the college in other vital ways. Our admissions staff appreciates the aid the "alumni recruiters" have given to promote Goshen College among high school students and their parents.

One dilemma our office faces is to communicate effectively with students. Often our only direct contact with these students is through high school visits which, because of limited time and other factors, are not fully adequate. The counsel and encouragement of alumni personally familiar with prospective students is of great help in solving the problem.

Just what the "recruiters" do and how they do it vary. For example, Merle and Kathy Sommers hosted parents of high school students in their home for a fruitful discussion with me about the college. Ralph and Ina Hunsberger brought their second busload of students to GC several weeks ago. Lynn and Lois Newcomer also invited two carloads of high schoolers to visit the campus. Russell and Lois Schertz involved several Goshen professors with students and parents in a meeting on a Sunday afternoon in February. Other alumni have been active participants in recruitment in other ways.

Following are the names, addresses, and phone numbers of the "alumni recruiters." Feel free to call or write one of them, or me, to offer your suggestions and assistance.

More news about that 'second' gift

Last November the Bulletin published a list of 538 companies which match gifts of alumni to Goshen College.

The gift-matching program, also known as "recycling your gift," is a significant source of annual support. It is a nationwide effort to benefit all accredited colleges and universities and it is spearheaded by the American Alumni Council.

Since November, the Council has released a 61-page book outlining the matching gift details of each company. It also contains nine pages, set in small type, listing the divisions and subsidiaries of the matching-gift companies.

Much as we'd like to, the list of divisions and subsidiaries is too long to be reproduced in the Bulletin. It is an important list, nevertheless, and is referred to often at GC.

The important point is: when you, as a former student (or spouse of a former student), send your gift, be sure to include the name of your firm (or your spouse's firm) with your gift. The Alumni Office will check the information to see whether your gift can do double duty. (An amazing number of firms, and their divisions and subsidiaries, will match gifts of a spouse — husband or wife — of an employee.)

One reason for the large number of firms with matching-gift programs is: it's the boss' way of saying "thanks" to the college which helped to provide your education.

Second, it's one way that businesses and corporations can assist education at a broad level. It complements what they do through university research and fellowship programs.

Partnership between industry and education is vital. Alumni hold the all-important key to generate the support and enthusiasm that will make the partnership a sustaining one.

Nurses in shortage areas may have loans paid

When the Nurse Training Act of 1971 was passed and signed into law, a provision was included to encourage nurses to practice their skills in areas of the U.S. where there is a shortage of nurses. Word received recently from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Division of Nursing, states the implementation of the provision is now being placed in effect.

The passage of the Act provides that any individual who has received a baccalaureate or associate degree in nursing (or an equivalent degree), a diploma in nursing, or a graduate degree in nursing and who received a Nursing Student Loan or any other educational loan for the costs of nurse training at a school of nursing, may be eligible to enter into an agreement with the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to serve as a full-time professional registered nurse for a continuous period of at least two years in an area in a state designated by the Secretary as having a shortage of and need for nurses.

Should a registered nurse enter into such an agreement, the Secretary will repay a portion of his/her education loans obtained after November 18, 1971, which is outstanding on the date such service is begun, as follows:

1. Upon completion of the first full year of the service as specified in the agreement, 30 per cent of the principal and interest of each loan will be repaid.

2. Upon completion of the second full year of such service, another 30 per cent of the principal and interest of each loan will be repaid.

3. Upon completion of a third full year of such service, an additional 25 per cent of the principal and interest of each loan will be repaid.

Anyone wishing to enter into such agreement with the Secretary should write a letter requesting information about the shortage areas and applications to the:

If you want an assured income for life, Goshen College offers you its charitable gift annuity agreement. Simply told, a charitable gift annuity agreement is a legal contract between you and Goshen College.

In return for your outright gift of cash, securities (stocks or bonds) or real estate, GC agrees to pay you income for life at a fixed and guaranteed rate. Your annuity rate is based on your age (nearest birthday) at the time your agreement is made.

A GC charitable gift annuity agreement can benefit you at least four ways:

1. You can make a major contribution to GC without losing income. Your contribution may be in the form of cash, securities, or real estate.

2. If you are age 70 or over, chances are your income will substantially increase.

3. The major portion of your annuity income will be tax free.

4. Your gift annuity will provide you a substantial and immediate charitable gift deduction on your federal income tax.

WRITE TODAY FOR MORE INFORMATION. There is no obligation on your part. Your inquiry will be treated in strict confidence.

They may have life. — Jesus

One-year program is ready for serious searchers

For young persons who want to concentrate seriously and extensively on questions of religious significance, Goshen College will launch LIFE next fall. LIFE is an acronym for "Living inquiry into faith and experience." Its starting point is belief in Jesus Christ.

The LIFE program has been under study for several years. In October a survey among students showed that 4 to 10 per cent of the students desired a two-trimester program. The program is not confined to academics, but is a blend of studies with life outside the classroom:

*Fellowship and sharing several times a week with a small group of students committed to the religious search.

*A "practicum" in local church life and in a service project. This means active congregational involvement, attendance and participation. Community service could include volunteer-type work at Faith Mission, Walnut Hill Day Care Center, Aux Chandelles center for mentally retarded, the county home, or Greencroft Villa.

*Two seminars on values and ideals.

*Two Bible/religion courses.

*Two elective courses that relate faith to any field (art, chemistry, history, teaching, business) the student chooses.

*Full credit toward the Bachelor of Arts degree, plus the option of choosing religion as a co-major.

*Leadership by Arthur E. Smoker, who has had many years of experience in youth ministry.

Important: how to contribute to the kingdom of God

John A. Lapp, dean of the college, views LIFE as: "A two-trimester focus on what is really important in a person's life. The issues will be value centered and future oriented. How does it contribute to the kingdom of God? This 'sorting things out' will take place not by one person isolated and alone. Rather, personal development will take place within a strong sense of community. Individual experience will be enhanced by group reflection upon it."

The community-living experience is one of the most attractive features of LIFE. Depending on student preference, it can be a K-group with a specially worked out covenant and 1 1/2-hour meetings twice a week, or it can be group living, also with weekly meetings and a covenant, plus full sharing of living costs and housekeeping chores. Regardless of the form, the group will offer support, encouragement, prayer, Bible study, and freedom for discussion of personal problems and pressures.

Interpersonal relationships are vital in LIFE

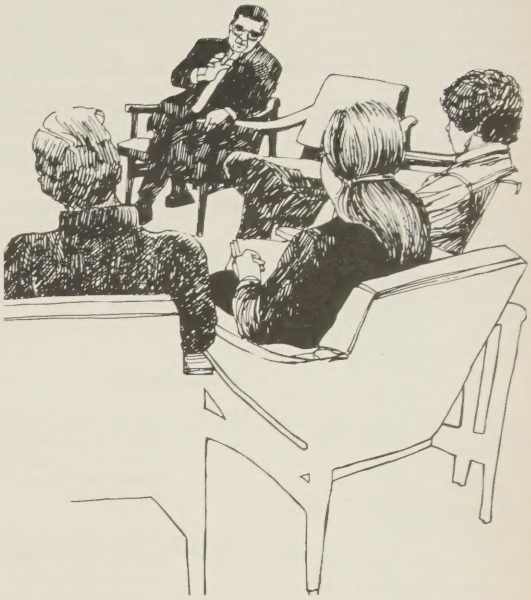
According to Loren Johns and Dave Mishler, both sophomores, two trimesters of intense interpersonal relationships are essential. The first trimester is needed to learn to know each other, find out the problems each one has, come to grips with what each one is studying. After this warm-up, the second trimester is the "growth" one.

Johns details it, "In our search, it's important to work together. The New Testament concept of the believers church means the church is responsible to work through problems and come to consensus."

One of the problems next year's LIFE group may tackle, if Johns is part of it, is the issue of wisdom. He clarifies, "The New Testament differentiates between worldly wisdom and true wisdom. So how and where can true wisdom be found? Do you pray and wait? Do you stay in college? Do you plan on seminary if you're considering the ministry?"

Questions of many varieties

Although questions like Johns raises can shake the foundations of Christian higher education, students need the freedom to ask them and work at them. Other questions that students are seeking answers to are:



Fellowship, sharing, and seminars are among the ingredients of LIFE.

"What really is my religion?" "How can I worship?" "Am I committing myself to God the way I should?" These are questions of Enid Stahl, a freshman from Davidsville, PA, who was a much-appreciated leader in the music program of her congregation before coming to GC.

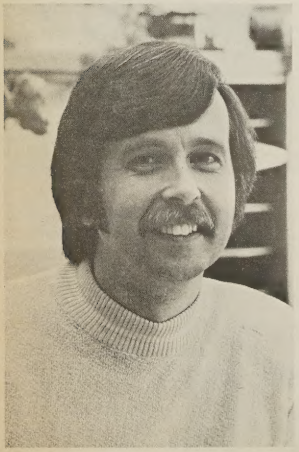
Johns and Mishler feel everyone has questions. Enid would agree. But it's easy not to worry about them and not to hunt for the answers. For them LIFE is for those bold enough to admit that they have questions and are ready to hunt for the answers.

LIFE easily accommodated in normal four college years

There is at least one other aspect to LIFE. Taking a year out to search for answers can be easily accommodated by most students in GC's four-year degree programs. There will be no additional trimesters required beyond the normal nine, thanks to the flexibility and versatility of the Humane Studies Program, also to be launched next fall.

A certain expectancy and excitement currently pervades the campus about LIFE. Janelle Miller, a freshman from Bourbon, IN, probably articulates it best. Eager to be in LIFE, she says, "I've grown a lot since I've come to GC in my relationship with God and through His help in being open and friendly with other persons. I'm excited about LIFE, and expect it to be an important step in my Christian life."

Art Smoker, youth leader, is appointed LIFE director



Arthur E. Smoker is LIFE director.

Arthur E. Smoker, 31, youth leader in the Mennonite Church since 1968, will direct LIFE, Living Inquiry into Fellowship and Experience, when the program is launched next fall.

Smoker has been associate secretary (youth ministry), Mennonite Board of Congregational Ministries since 1972, and was secretary for youth ministry under the denomination's commission for Christian education, 1968 to 1972.

A search to discover values

Anticipating his new assignment, Smoker says, "I am enthusiastic about searching with students to discover values that give meaning to life, and to find the path of commitment growing out of these values. I look forward to sharing freely my own pilgrimage in commitment to Jesus Christ and my struggle to discover faithfulness to Him and His call."

Smoker will meet with LIFE's fellowship and living groups, help students organize the values seminars, help select faculty to lead the seminars, and help place students for service and congregation experiences.

Half time at Center

The LIFE directorship is set up as a half-time assignment. The other half of Smoker's responsibilities will be as assistant director of the Center for Discipleship.

At the Center, Smoker will help plan and carry out its programs and workshops, including Discipleship Forums offered for the first time last fall. Smoker sees his work, "so the Center may continue to be responsive to issues people face in congregational life." Through the Center he also wants to help students explore issues of life and faith, and what it means to take part and to give leadership to the church today.

Smoker, a 1961 graduate of Christopher Dock Mennonite High School, received the B.A. degree from Goshen College in 1965. He was a Rockefeller Theological Fellow at Harvard Divinity School, 1965-66, and was graduated from Goshen Biblical Seminary, 1968. He is married to the former Nova Jean Wingard. They are members of the College Mennonite Church.

Program is set

Festival of the Word centers in Gospel of John

"The Word becoming flesh" is the theme of the Festival of the Word, set for the 76th annual commencement weekend, April 19-21, on the campus.

Festival and commencement activities will center in the Gospel of John, and will share a common focus: The Word with us — in Christ, in Scripture, in fellowship.

Of the major speakers, no one will address the mass sessions more than once. John H. Yoder, of Goshen Biblical Seminary, will deliver the kick-off address Friday evening in Union Auditorium. All sermons will be exegetical, that is, they will expound the biblical text.

The program outline, as the Bulletin goes to press is:

Friday, April 19

1:00 p.m.	Registration opens. (Union Auditorium)
7:30 p.m.	"Glory in a tent. John 1." John H. Yoder, of Goshen Biblical Seminary. (Union Auditorium)

Saturday, April 20

8:45 a.m.	"Who is Jesus?" J.C. Wenger, of Goshen Biblical Seminary. (Union Auditorium)
10:30 a.m.	Small groups will meet for further study of the text.
1:30 p.m.	Senior nurses class program. (Church-Chapel)
1:45 p.m.	"Whosoever believeth." J. R. Burkholder, of Goshen College. (Union Auditorium)
3:00 p.m.	Small groups will meet for further study of the text.
4:00 p.m.	Reception for 1974 graduates and their parents.
4:00-6:00 p.m.	Activities: The Word with Us in Creativity
8:00 p.m.	"Passion according to St. John," by J.S. Bach, by college choruses and orchestra. Lon Sherer conducting. (Union Auditorium)

Sunday, April 21

9:30 a.m.	"Listen to him? Why? John 10:20." Emma Richards, co-pastor of Lombard (IL) Mennonite Church. (Union Auditorium)
11:00 a.m.	"From glory to glory. John 21:18, 19." Baccalaureate sermon by J. Lawrence Burkholder, president of Goshen College. (Union Auditorium)
3:00 p.m.	"Looking for a word. John 8:37." 76th annual commencement address by Martin Marty, of University of Chicago Divinity School. (Union Auditorium)
6:00-7:30 p.m.	"Loaves and fishes" love feast. Final event of the weekend.

Festival moderator: Jack Dueck, of Goshen College. Dueck is also director of planning for the Festival.
Festival song leader: Mary Oyer, of Goshen College.

In the style of the 1972 and 1973 Festivals of the Holy Spirit, this year's Festival will include:

Study guides. Now ready for use in advance of the Festival, the guides are an introduction to the Gospel of John and serve as a model for study of the text. They are intended for Sunday-school classes, Bible groups, or individual study. Copies are available from the Festival office. The price is 35¢ each; 30¢ each in quantities of 10 or more ordered at the same time.

Price: 35c each; 30c each in quantities of 10 or more at the same time. On sale by Festival Office, Goshen College, Goshen, IN 46526. Litho in U.S.A.

Small groups. Following each Saturday sermon, about 50 discussion leaders will be on hand to continue the study of biblical texts. The small groups stem from the interest and need expressed by persons of all ages for sound biblical study. Discussion leaders will inspire a new appreciation for the Book.

Song book. A new Festival Song Book will be published. The 48-page book will contain the most popular ones of the past two festivals. About one-fourth of the songs have been written by college students, and are being published for the first time.

Creative activities. Impromptu drama and skits, making and firing of ceramic mugs, poetry reading, a "paint-in" and other supervised activities for children, an organ recital or two, the annual exhibition of work by college art students — are in the planning for the weekend. Guitarists — young and old — are urged to bring their instruments.

Film. Documentary for the weekend will be the three-part motion picture, "How the Bible came to us."

"Fun." Three campfire pits will be sited on campus for evening "firesides" and late evening "sings."

Meals. In addition to meal service in the college's dining room and snack shop, a meal tent is planned — for sausage-and-pancake breakfasts, plus luncheons and dinners as well. A special New Testament-style "loaves and fishes" love feast will climax the festival on Sunday evening.

Registration and support. The Festival is free to all, and there will be no registration charge. Freewill offerings will cover Festival costs.

Sponsorship. Sponsors are the Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries and Goshen College in cooperation with the Central District Conference of the General Conference Mennonites and the Illinois, Indiana-Michigan, and Ohio and Eastern conferences of the Mennonite Church.

A teacher worthy of his vocation

Marion M. Bontrager, associate professor of mathematics.
Aug. 22, 1923 — Feb. 5, 1974.

By ATLEE BEECHY

Marion M. Bontrager, on the faculty since 1968, walked so quietly among us, yet left his imprint so deeply in the hearts of many.

Marion's vocation was following Christ, and this he did primarily through his teaching. He walked worthy of both dimensions. Teaching was his life. Though highly gifted and competent (one student has said he knew math backwards and forwards), he walked with "meekness and long-suffering."

Students have commented on what Marion meant to them: "Marion was GC for me. I had him every trimester since I've been here. Marion wanted us to learn. He expected us to work but he was fair. He was patient when we made a mistake or when we couldn't complete the problem on the board, he'd say, 'Join the rest of us; we're human.' He brought in outside materials to make math interesting. He had a subtle, effective sense of humor coming out in unexpected ways and times. I liked it. I had good math teachers in high school, but Marion was the best I've ever had."

One student feels the words Marion often used summarized his teaching approach:

> I hear and I forget
> I see and I remember
> I do and I understand.

Another student put it this way: "The first time I went to class I was afraid. My limited knowledge of math — his abundant knowledge — made me feel awed and uneasy. But I learned to know him as a person, found him to be interested in me. I wish more could have learned to know him that way."

His colleagues also speak highly of him. He was competent, well organized, thorough, cooperative, patient, a concerned and dedicated teacher. One co-worker said Marion's life reminded him of the saying, "Still waters run deep."

As I learned to know Marion these past years, I also found behind the quiet, shy manner, great strengths and deep currents. I found hope and struggle, warmth and humor, concern and pain. I found a sensitive spirit seeking to understand life's demands. This he did with courage and integrity, and with a sense of dependence upon God's enabling grace. I found here in the inner room deep faith, great affection for and dedication to his family — his wife Eloise and his daughters Sharon and Pamela — and great appreciation for God's out-of-doors and for the simple joys.

Marion was human too. He had strengths and weaknesses, problems, joys and conflicts as we all do. Sometimes he seemed to be too much hidden. Those who did not have or did not take the opportunity to move beyond the threshold did not discover the real Marion. All of us whose lives were touched and enriched by his are reminded of the importance of opening ourselves to each other, to move toward our brothers and sisters, to listen more intently to what those who walk quietly are saying, and to respect the diversity of gifts and patterns among us.

Nineteen seventy-three will be remembered as one of the finest years for soccer at Goshen College. John Ingold's squad finished fifth in the NAIA post-season national soccer tournament and won more games than any previous GC team, ending 14-3 on the season.

With only three seniors on this year's squad, the Leafs won their fourth Mid-Central Conference championship, sharing it with Marion and Grace. Goshen's four-year record in the MCC stands at 22-1.

The 1973 Maple Leafs scored 69 goals, tying the record set by the 1971 team. Rich Clemens set an individual record managing 11 assists this season.

Top scorers in the 1973 soccer campaign were Fred Driver (junior), a Hesston transfer, with 16 goals and 8 assists; Rich Clemens (senior), 10 goals and 11 assists; and Bob Gingrich (freshman), 11 goals and 4 assists.

Goshen shut out five opponents. This was the first year since 1970 that Goshen was held scoreless in a soccer game as Davis and Elkins made GC the victim in national tournament action.

In post-season tournament play, Goshen won its second District 21 playoff in three years by beating Manchester 7-1 and by holding high-scoring Marion scoreless for the second time this year 1-0. Both Area Four contests were played at Goshen and the Leafs won twice, besting Spring Arbor (Michigan) 1-0, and Walsh (Ohio) 2-1.

By winning Area Four competition, Goshen advanced to the NAIA national finals for the second time in three seasons. In 1971, Goshen tied for seventh place in the nationals.

John Ingold's nine-season soccer record is 91-16-4. In 16 years as competitive sport at Goshen, soccer teams here have accumulated a 99-46-6 mark.

Basketball

After completing 18 games of a 20 game regular season, the 1973-74 Goshen College basketball team sported a 12-6 overall mark and had an 8-4 Mid-Central Conference showing, placing the Leafs behind Huntington College and Tri-State.

High lights to date of the basketball season include a Mennonite Classic championship, won during Thanksgiving vacation, hosted at Goshen. GC beat Tabor 75-63 in the opening round and stopped Bluffton in the championship match 81-57.

As the season came to a close, four starters were in double figures, with 6-6 freshman Loren Nofsinger (Washington, IL) leading all players with 15 points per contest. Six foot senior Mike Sommer (Foosland, IL) averaged 12.7 points per game; 5-9 senior Glenn Miller (Kidron, OH) 12.5 per game; and 6-2 junior Steve Mast (Goshen) averaged 10.9 per game. Six-five freshman Mike Miller, Wakarusa, the other GC starter, was making 7 points a game.

Wrestling

Goshen College organized a wrestling club this winter, with Wayne Zehr (GC grad) as volunteer coach. Although the team is a club status rather than a varsity status, several matches have been scheduled.

Goshen matmen scrimmaged Manchester and competed in a three way meet with Huntington College and Centre College, Kentucky. GC also was one of six colleges represented at the Huntington Invitational in February.

The club also had a wrestling exhibition following a junior varsity basketball game in February. Although the wrestling program has just started at Goshen, several players have good records to date, and next season the club should see much improvement.

To congregations, alumni, parents, business and industry, friends

Thank you . . . for surrounding us

"As we grow in faith we also tend to grow in (a) sense of our own helplessness" (Thomas Merton).

This has been my experience, and with a growing sense of being surrounded and supported by help — in the faculty-staff brotherhood, in the congregation, in the denominational church and in the church of Christ as a whole. These are continually fresh channels of the love of God in Christ through the Holy Spirit.

We are sustained physically. Our bread is bought by others, some of whom may not have a full loaf of their own. (How can we reciprocate?)

We are sustained spiritually through prayer and through the context of meaning provided by a host of Christians within and without the Anabaptist brotherhood.

None of us needs to work in a void. Our offices are less like cubicles than like Trampolines, in which our much falling is caught and we are buoyed up again with more energy — more energy for a disciplined search for fact and a disciplined development of thought at the service of the Holy Spirit for His work in church and world — more energy to become the persons that our students need us to be.

Thank you, and thank you especially for your support when it is not clear what benefit you receive from the college and when you are most aware of our mistakes.

Announcing a new opportunity

'Seeking . . .'

By J. LAWRENCE BURKHOLDER

The ancient Greek philosophers noticed that in love and aesthetic experience desire is ironically satisfied and increased at the same time. That would seem to be true of the religious life as well. The deeper and more satisfying the experience of God, the more one "seeks" God.

This may explain why an increasing number of students at Goshen seek a deeper understanding of the faith. They know that a routine, conventional and superficial approach to Christianity is not the answer. The Christian faith and life must be searched for, probed, tested and tried if the deeper meaning of conversion, discipleship, the gifts of the Spirit and the mission of the church are to be understood and expressed.

This new program which we call LIFE is intended to offer an opportunity for students to devote a full year to search for the real meaning of Christianity. LIFE is an acronym meaning "Living inquiry into faith and experience." It can be fit into a regular four-year liberal arts program, whatever one's major, and it will offer to each student a co-major in religion.

Some students who have expressed interest in LIFE are not necessarily those who would call themselves "religious." Rather they are learners and after all that is what disciples are. They are concerned and they cannot be satisfied with a Christian life-style which is unexamined, or with a biblical understanding which is superficial, or with a conception of the church which is merely conventional, or with a theology which is a collection of slogans.

LIFE will enable students to plan their careers in the context of a fellowship. They will discuss what it means to "seek first the kingdom." They will discern their "gifts." They will identify with a local congregation as interns. They will try to understand and evaluate the dominant forces of our society. They will learn how to participate in a group.

We are pleased to announce that Arthur E. Smoker, associate secretary (youth ministry) of the Mennonite Board of Congregational Ministries, will join the Goshen faculty to direct the program. He brings to this position invaluable experience gained as a youth leader in the Mennonite Church.
